Mason, Slidell Captured
Aboard British Steamer
by Lon K. Savage
The capture of Mason and Slidell, themselves, had been done quite simply. Wilkes, returning from Africa, had put in on Cuba's southern coast and had learned that the two Confederates had run the blockade from Charleston and arrived at Hilton Head. There they were taken aboard the Trent. He immediately took his ship into the Bahama channel to intercept the Trent. Wilkes forced the Confederates to come aboard his ship, boarded her and seized the two men. He then sent his executive officer and some men to her in small boats. There, the plan was outlined to the outraged British captain and captured at sea a week earlier within a week. William H. Se-
