Already in use in many sections of the country, TV lessons may someday become as commonplace as TV westerns. Bell System TV transmission facilities and years of experience are a valuable asset to educators who are looking for a solution to a growing shortage of qualified teachers.

Film available for showing here

A color motion picture showing how a globe-circling network operates behind the scenes to guide America's men in space is now available for showing by schools, churches, or clubs in Carlisle, C. A. Harris, Southern Bell manager here said.

Titled "A Voice for Mercury," the documentary film takes the audience to remote corners of the world to see how stations in the huge tracking and communications system were built in spots where primitive forms of labor were the only means for installing the most modern spaceage equipment.

The viewer is placed in the shoes of an astronaut embarking on a trip through space, as the film demonstrates the lightning speed of computers calculating orbital data with but a few precious seconds to produce the correct answers. Also shown is the in-flight activity at several stations of the 18-station global network, which was built by a five-member industrial team for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

It is one of many films available without charge from the Bell Telephone Company. Information about this and other films may be obtained from the telephone business office by calling 9000.
