attendance and better attendance will lessen the failure problems.

Since school attendance is a responsibility not only for the schools but for every parent, citizen, and county official concerned, it has been agreed upon that the Kentucky Attendance Law will be enforced. Parents and others who are responsible for seeing that a child attends school in accordance with the requirements of the law will be held responsible to the extent that those who violate the attendance law will be brought to court to account for the violation.

Nicholas County lunch workers hold meeting

An in-service program of training was held on August 30 at the Nicholas County high school for the county school lunch workers. Miss Jane Lewis, District School Lunch Supervisor, was present to help with planning a better school lunch program for Nicholas County. Mrs. Elizabeth Clay, County School Lunch Director, showed two films, "Understanding Vitamins" and "The Best Way to Eat."

Menus for the first month of school were planned. The following goals were adopted: 1. Serve nutritionally adequate Type A lunches that are well balanced, attractive, appetizing and economical. 2. Strive for increased participation. 3. Improve standards in menu planning, organization of work, preparation of food, buying practices, serving methods and sanitation 4. Complete cooperation with all school and school lunch personnel. 5. Interested in helping school children have better health. 6. Like and feel enthusiasm for school lunch work. 7. Improve storage practices. 8. Use a continuous inventory.

Luncheon was served in the school cafeteria and those attending were Miss Jane Lewis, Mrs. Elizabeth Clay, Nicholas County grade school lunch workers, Mrs. Elizabeth Conyers, Mrs. Billie Ockerman and Mrs. Miranda Alexander; Moorefield School lunch workers, Mrs. Sylvia McQuithy and Mrs. Evelyn Bailey; guests, Charles Wilson, Principal NCHS and Miss Sue West, Home Economics Teacher NCHS.

Training held for teachers

On August 31 and September 1 the Nicholas County Teachers met at the Nicholas County high school for a program of in-service training held by Raymond Wesley, school superintendent. The program of work centered around the bulletin "About People and Teaching," by Robert E. Bills, Associate Professor of Psychology, University of Kentucky, in the forms of group discussions. Group leaders included Charles Wilson, Principal, NCHS; Elmer Bellamy, Principal, NCGS; Mrs. Lucille Irvin, Principal, Moorefield School; Mrs. Marjorie Wilson, 6th grade teacher at NCGS, and Mr. Wesley. Following the discussion periods the group reported their recommendations on how better teaching may be accomplished in Nicholas County.

On the afternoon of August 31, a tour was conducted by Mr. Wesley to the Moorefield and Nicholas County Grade Schools. Each teacher at the respective schools was in her room to greet the visiting teachers. The purpose of the tour was to acquaint each teacher in Nicholas County with the total county school education for Nicholas County children.

Lunch was served each day by the Nicholas County high school lunch workers, Mrs. Clarine Lyman and Mrs. Lillian Vice, in the school cafeteria.

Nicholas County Board adopts Safety Policy

At its regular meeting Saturday, September 2, 1961, the Nicholas County Board of Education adopted a policy to protect children from uncalled for danger. No child will be permitted to leave a bus anywhere along the route to or from school except when it is necessary to board a second bus to reach his destination. No child will be permitted to dismount a bus to go inside a store.

There are few exceptions to the policy. Parents will be permitted to pick up their own children at any point on the route and a school principal may authorize a bus driver to permit a child to leave the bus at a point other than his regular dismounting stop.

Some parents, who work away from home, often want their children to ride with the parents in the afternoon. Arrangements may be made with the school principal for children to ride home with the parents to any other person, provided such arrangements must be done in writing rather than by telephone.

The policy was adopted to protect children. The county furnishes transportation to and from school and children are covered by insurance as long as they are in the custody of the driver. The responsibility of the Board ends when the child leaves the bus under the care or direction of the parent.

Conservation Congress Sept. 28-29 expects 1,000 persons to attend

Frankfort, August — Kentucky's first annual Conservation Congress will be held in Louisville, Sept. 28 and 29, at the Kentucky Hotel. Approximately 1,000 persons are expected to attend the meeting, State Conservation Commissioner J. O. Mattlick reported.

Sponsored by the Natural Resources Development Committee, the Congress is being held to bring together for the first time representatives of all agencies, groups and individuals interested in conserving our natural resources.

Two cabinet members are expected to be among the speakers—Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall and Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman. Also coming from Washington are Dr. Richard E. McArdle, chief of the U. S. Forest Service and Dr. E. L. Hendricks, chief of the Service Water Branch, U. S. Geological Survey.

Other speakers include Gov. Bert Combs, Lt. Gov. Wilson Wyatt, Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State College, and Barry Bingham, editor and publisher of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times.

Gov. Combs' letter of invitation to Kentuckians to attend the meeting pointed out that, "Within the next 20 years our nation will need an increase of over 50 per cent in our present water supply, 30 per cent more lumber, 50 per cent more pulpwood, and over 100 million additional acres of land under soil conservation practices.

"Each and every citizen has inherited a responsibility to future generations to actively support programs designed to conserve and develop our natural resources.

"By taking part in this Conservation Congress you will become better acquainted, we believe, with your means of conserving the natural wealth of our state."

Additional information about this meeting may be obtained by writing the chairman, J. O. Matlick, commissioner, Conservation, Capitol Annex, Frankfort, Ky.

Gov. Combs to dedicate Guild train at Hazard

Frankfort, Sept.—An unusual two-car train will take to the rails in Kentucky this month as part of a large-scale program currently under way to revitalize Kentucky's tradition of fine handcrafted products.

The Guild Train, sponsored jointly by the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen and the Division of Arts and Crafts of the Kentucky Department of Economic Development, will contain a display of fine paintings and examples of Kentucky handcraft products in one car. The other car will contain a complete workshop designed for teaching handcraft arts and demonstrating specialized techniques.

The train is to be dedicated Sept. 16 at Hazard by Gov. Bert Combs, with Lt. Gov. Wilson Wyatt and other State officials in attendance, as well as local officials and officers of the Guild.

Paul Hadley, director of the Guild Division of Arts and Crafts and secretary of the Guild, said the primary purpose of the train is to stimulate interest and participation in the new Home Industries Program and to develop appreciation for the fine arts.

The Home Industries Program, sponsored jointly by the Department of Economic Development and the non-profit Guild, is designed to provide a source of income for Kentuckians in areas of the state where industrial and business opportunities are limited.

By providing assistance to craftsmen in designing products and providing technical training, financing, marketing and general supervision, the program will make it possible for handcrafters to use their skills profitably. At be same time the program will help preserve Kentucky's native handcraft traditions.

During its first year of operation the Guild Train is scheduled to visit communities in Eastern Kentucky along the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. It will remain in each community about a week, giving local residents and craftsmen an opportunity to inspect the displays and learn production techniques.

Following the Hazard visit, the train is scheduled to visit the Jackson beginning Sept. 28; Whitesburg, Oct. 10; Beattyville, Oct. 20; Irvine-Ravenna, Nov. 2; Winchester, Nov. 14; and Lexington, Nov. 24. Other stops and dates will be announced later.

The L&N Railroad, which donated the two cars, will move the train from town to town without charge and will provide all mechanical maintenance. All the equipment installed in the cars has been donated by Kentucky business firms.

Contributions to the project now total more than $250,000, according to Hadley. John Dillehay, former director of Louisville's Junior Art Gallery, will be director of the Guild Train which has special living accommodations for his use.

Broiler-fryers are very good buys now, but take care of those you buy at the market. Refrigerate them as soon as you get them home. Remove the transparent film packaging from broilers, cover them loosely, and store them in the coldest part of the refrigerator until you're ready to use them. Cut-up broiler-fryers should be stored only one to two days for best quality.

Most flowers have dense, fibrous root systems near the soil's surface so chopping the soil 2 or 3 inches deep to kill weeds will cut many of the feeding roots of the flowers. Just barely cut the soil surface ½ to ½ inch deep with a sharp hoe to kill weeds; or mulch the area with some old hay, straw, peat moss, or something to keep the soil moist and the weeds down.

Two-week food supply survival necessity Beauchamp states

A two week emergency supply of food is a survival necessity for every Kentucky family, Agriculture Commissioner Emerson Beauchamp urges. Under the commissioner of agriculture's emergency plan the responsibility for the control and distribution of food products in the event of a national catastrophe brought about by nuclear warfare.

In urging a family stockpile of food sufficient for a 14-day need Beauchamp lists seven major considerations in selecting food for shelter storage. These are: (1) A relatively long shelter life-generally, the selection of foods having a longer shelf life reduces the problem of stored food surveillance and replacement. (2) Palatability-foods selected should be of the kind usually consumed by the family. Salt and other condiments should also be provided. (3) Relatively economical-costs of the food stored should not be so great as to make the shelter program generally prohibitive but at the same time the shelter diet should not be so austere as to bring revolt from the shelter occupants. (4) Ease of preparation and serving-foods selected should be suited to the available equipment and fuel supply. Selections should include simple meals that can be served directly from their containers. (5) Completely edible-foods selected should be empty edible to minimize the problem of garbage disposal and to save space. (6) Suitability-
