THE "GENERAL"

"Ramble County" filmed at Danville.

On June 6, 1961 the "General" was moved from the shed at Union Station, Chattanooga, and taken to Atlanta where it was reconstructed in its own steam. During the months to come the Little Rock section will be dismantled and every part will be inspected and repaired. The major items made were a new set of flues for the boiler, new valves, and new tires for the drivers.

Originally the "General" was equipped with a small hand brake on the tender. Now an order to comply with Interstate Commerce Commission regulations, the "General" was added. In keeping with the "General" tradition, the shopmen utilized the oldest known locomotive repair shop in the country, the stand old air brake cylinder and hand brake.

A wood burner when built for the "General" a coal burner. The General has its boiler heated by a set of 1,538 oil tubes. Ernest Mann, machinist at Knoxville, Tenn., is the one to build and install the boiler. The boiler was the prize completion with 4790 and 4780, following the completion of James P. Morris of Akron, Ohio.
