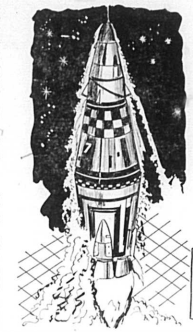
Two Patriots

"I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." — Nathan Hale



THESE words were spoken when it was fashionable to be a patriot.

Today, men seem hesitant to speak of love of country. This is regretful; it costs far less to be a patriot in 1962 than in 1776. Hale paid with his life, was refused a Bible, and denied the services of a minister.

We should be thankful that our latest national hero, Astronaut John Glenn, is a patriot and does not hesitate to declare himself.

We should also be grateful that he is a man of faith, with courage to thank God for his deeds and accomplishments.

In these times we need patriotism — and belief in God — more than ever.
