An Efficiently Run Grocery Store Can Save You Money

How your grocer handles his merchandise can make a dollar-and-cents difference to you. Why? Because an efficient grocer, who saves money through time saving work methods, can pass along part of these savings to his customers.

If the average-size supermarket could save 1 second in the handling of each item, this alone would mean a savings of over $1,400 a year, according to economists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service.

A large store that tray packs its canned goods—that is, cuts the top off a carton and moves the merchandise, carton and all, to the retail display—saves up to $3,900 a year.

A retailer can even save money in the way he prices his items. USDA research shows that stick marginsHouse that make the purple markings on cans and cartons—are quicker and easier to use than other devices. Your grocer saves $500 a year if he uses price-marked stamps.

Other similar savings come from more efficient handling, small inventories and careful work schedules. In fact, it's these small savings at the retail market that mean the market ing bill. They help offset wage increases, one of the big reasons that marketing costs—and your food bill—have gone up in recent years. ASMs marketing researchers are constantly seeking new ways to make the retail grocer more efficient and the job he does less costly.

Next time you go into the grocery store, look around and see if your grocer operates efficiently. If he has his uses good handling methods and keeps busy, you'll probably pay less for the food you buy there—or, at least, less than you would pay in a poorly-managed retail food store.

Lake meeting held; landscape plans are shown group

A cottage on the Nicholas County Development Corporation lake is becoming more of a reality and less of a dream following Monday evening's meeting at which John Scruggs of Scruggs & Hammond landscape engineers outlined his firm's proposed plans for roads, resident areas, lodges, boat docks, swimming beach, overlooks and parking areas.

The meeting at the courthouse was opened by Charles M. Cox, president of the corporation, who introduced Mr. Scruggs.

From master drawings and enlargements one was able to visualize the size and proposed outlines of the residential areas. All lakefront lots have at least 100 feet of frontage and some are deeper than 150 feet, a figure used when lots were first sold.

Due to limited funds it was quickly established that a sewage treatment plant for the area was out because of the cost, but it was noted that deeds to the lots would carry a clause placing the burden of proper sanitation on the owner that is, an approved septic system for each residence or group of residences.

Water and gas would be brought to the area as soon as funds and demand permitted.

Reproduced in this issue on page four is a portion of the master map of the proposed road system, for the recreation area. Due to its largeness, part of the road on the left was omitted, as was the 4-H area to the right. Symbols on the map are as follows:

Existing roads
Proposed roads
Proposed parking areas
Lakeside trails
Boat docks

County Agent warns farmers

County Agent Estil J. Noffsinger this week cautioned Nicholas county farmers about use of a cattle spray named Co-Ral, an insecticide used to kill ticks, grubs, hornflies and lice.

The company has called in certain suspected production lots, Mr. Noffsinger says he was told by R. L. Miller, UK Agricultural Extension Service entomologist.

Here is Miller's statement: "Late in September, 1962, unexplained losses of cattle were found following the use of Co-Ral for control of cattle grubbs.

"When the company that manufactures the material learned of these losses, they removed all Co-Ral from the market.

"Any individuals who still may have Co-Ral that was purchased this summer should return it to their supplier. An investigation

Mt. Sterling, after a long illness. A native of Bath county, he was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ Latter Day Saints.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Ollie Mae Hatton; three sons, Hoot J. Hatton, Winchester; Edward F. Hatton, Chillicothe, Ohio, and Floyd Hatton, Frankfort, Ohio; a daughter, Mrs. Carl Stephenson, Chillicothe; two brothers, James Richard Hatton, Sharpsburg, and Robert L. Hatton, Carlisle; two sisters, Mrs. Elzie Manley, Nicholas county, and Mrs. Walter White, Paris, and several grandchildren.

Services were conducted at 1:30 p.m. Monday at the Eastin-Richey Funeral Home by the Church of the Latter Day Saints. Burial in Machpelah Cemetery. Bearers, Pete Markland, Chester and Charles Farris, John Phillips, John Manley and Marvin Hatton.

of the insecticide has shown that the toxic effects attributed to certain lots have been traced to the presence of a compound known as "Sulfotepp" in the Co-Ral insecticide.

"Co-Ral now being shipped is safe to use on cattle as a spray for the control of lice, ticks and screw-worms, at the rate of 8 pounds to 100 gallons of water. Dipping in concentrations of 4 pounds of 25% wettable power per 100 gallons of water for control of lice, hornflies, and ticks is also still recommended.

"Cattle should not be treated after November 1 for grub control because the damage has already been done and because the grubs located in the throat, if killed, may choke the animals to death."

Thank you Nicholas Jaycees

Congratulations are in store for the Nicholas County Jaycees for their newest project — erecting road markers on all the county roads.

The Nicholas fiscal court ordered posts set in concrete, so that members of the organization would have a sturdy standard on which to place the name signs.

Some 500 man hours and over $700 has been spent by the Junior Chamber during the past three weeks in this project.

Strangers will find it a lot easier to negotiate the county roads now that they are well marked, and direction giving has been greatly simplified.
