A Little Yappin'

By Nellie Crump
Mrs. Elbra Gaunce and Mrs. Edgar Buckler attended burial rites for their son, Mrs. Mary Wagner of Harrodsburg, at the Pleasant Methodist church in Harrison county on Wednesday last week.
Little Misses Betsy and Julie Griffin of Lexington spent a few days as guests of their aunt, Miss Halley Griffin. They are granddaughters of Willie Bell Griffin of Lexington, formerly of Carlisle.
Mr. and Mrs. Cray Marshall and family attended the Lexington Fair Friday night. Barbara said she found a nice cool spot atop the huge ferris wheel after the 90-plus heat of the day. I wandered a little if "nerves" had anything to do with it. The wheel was said to be a real hair-raising experience.
I wish to thank my friends and neighbors for the nice tomatoes, corn, peppers, onions, cucumbers, etc. that I have received recently. It is O yes the generous helping of Vinegar Pie also.

Three in a Row.
Last week was an unusual and most hectic one for Omer "Charly" Hunt, mechanic at Buntin's Garage. On Saturday his youngest and last son married. During the following week, the machinery he was working on, fell, cutting a painful gash on his head. Last, but not least, a day or so later, a piece of steel met his head, imbedding itself in his eye. For this he was rushed to Pairs where the silver was expertly removed at a doctor's office. Phoning Buntin's later, I was told by Chester Ockerman that the patient is "back on the job and doing nicely."

Thawed Frozen Foods
Do thawed foods spoil faster than fresh? There doesn't seem to be much difference in the rate of spoilage of thawed frozen meats and fresh meats. This is because of the fact that when the meat is frozen, the water in it is frozen and the bacteria are killed. When the meat is thawed, the bacteria are not revived. Therefore, the rate of spoilage is about the same for fresh and thawed meats.
Opinions vary on this question. But when research reports are studied there doesn't seem to be much difference in the rate of spoilage of thawed frozen meats and fresh meats. This is because of the fact that when the meat is frozen, the water in it is frozen and the bacteria are killed. When the meat is thawed, the bacteria are not revived. Therefore, the rate of spoilage is about the same for fresh and thawed meats.
Paul Elliott and Robert Straka, bacteriologists in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Utilization Research Laboratory in Albany, Calif., recently surveyed past researches on this subject and conducted their own tests on whole and minced chicken.

Less Fat Needed
Many expert cooks agree that the only easy way to make flaky, tender pastry is to use a lot of fat. But U. S. Department of Agric. scientists, seeking ways to reduce fat in baked products, announce two methods of mixing dough that make high-quality pastry with less than the usual amount of fat. And the methods are not difficult. The waxed paper is also a good paper for also-a-fat pastry. The recipe is for a flaky, tender pie crust.

With Solid Fat
Solid fat is also responsible for the success of the solid-fat method which allows you to use less fat than usual. With this method, water is not added until after the fat has been dried with the dry ingredients. Ingredients for a two-crust pie are 1/2 cup solid fat, 3 tablespoons water, 2 cups all-purpose flour, and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Using an electric mixer, cream the oil and water into the dry ingredients evenly distributes it throughout the mixture — and it's this even distribution that makes melt-in-the-mouth pastry.
Corn, cottonseed, soybean, and safflower oil work equally well.

Berea Train Peace Corps
The spiritual and educational enrichments Berea College has brought to Kentucky and the nation over the years are well known to all today, if it is directly contributing the education to greater understanding of the world. Berea is now training a group of Peace Corps Volunteers to serve in Senegal, a land best known to most of us because of the famous air terminal, Dakar, situated at the crossroads of the three continents, Africa, Europe and Asia.
The Peace Corps Volunteers attending Berea College are being trained in four specific fields: English instruction, athletic coaching, irrigation and well-digging, and masonry construction. Senegal has specifically requested assistance in these areas as it works to achieve its place in the Community of Nations.
All of the 35 Volunteers have been great success and have had experience in their own fields of knowledge. The teachers will teach English in the secondary school system and the coaches will train Senegalese athletes. The irrigation and well-digging experts will be of great value to the Senegalese in bringing water to their own lands, presently uncultivated. The construction experts will help build houses and buildings to fulfill the needs of the villages.
In addition to being briefed in their own areas, the Volunteers are being given orientation courses on Senegal, its geography, history, economy and cultural heritage. Also during this ten-week training period, 25 hours will be devoted to American studies so that the Volunteers may become more fully aware of American life and culture. To assist in this, the Volunteers are being given a detailed instruction manual, including the main language for the Volunteers.

At Berea College has given inspiration to the hopes of men in the past, so does it now, and so may it in the future.
District Visitors
John Wilford and Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Munford, of Frankfort, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Souder, Miss Donna and Miss Martha Souder, of Corinth, W. R. Selby, of Danville, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fain, Dick Fain and Miss Priscilla Fain, of Lexington.
In order for any educational institution to participate in the Peace Corps training program, they must first express their interest to do so. When I talked with the Peace Corps officials here in Washington, they told me that Berea's philosophy of education and work was one of the main reasons Berea was selected. They feel that it is similar to the Peace Corps' philosophy of giving practical assistance and helping people achieve dignity through their own labors.
Berea's President, Francis S. Hutchins, wrote in his report to the Volunteers: "The College welcomes you, for we have a great respect for the extension of good will and understanding among the peoples of the earth."

FARMERS! Protect Yourself Now From The Possible SEED SHORTAGE AHEAD

No doubt, you've heard about it. Because of a killing winter and spring drought, a critical shortage of quality seeds for fall planting is predicted. You may wonder, "How can I avoid having to accept inferior seeds or varieties that may cut my profits? Is there any way to protect myself?" The answer is yes—if you know without delay.
Reserve Your SS Fall Seeds Now
Your Cooperative has a plan whereby you can reserve your top-quality Southern States Fall Seeds now. No extra charge, no deposit required. Pay nothing in advance. Farmers with less foresight may suffer. But once planting time, you'll have top-yielding, money-making Southern States Seeds. A phone call now will reserve yours.
