Resources Booklet

Frankfort, Ky. — The Kentucky Department of Commerce, in cooperation with the Carlisle-Nicholas County Chamber of Commerce, has prepared a new brochure describing and tabulating the industrial resources of Carlisle and Nicholas County. Industrial employment and numbers of workers available for jobs also are presented for Nicholas County and adjacent counties.

It is expected that the booklet will be printed and ready for distribution within two weeks.

Material for the brochure was compiled by the Community Development Division of the State agency and by the Carlisle-Nicholas County Chamber of Commerce.

The new publication presents up-to-date data on the following subjects, all of interest to industrialists considering locating new production facilities in Carlisle and Nicholas County: Population and labor market, manufacturing sites, manufacturing industries, transportation, utilities and fuel, local government and services, taxes, housing health and educational facilities, libraries, churches, communications, clubs and organizations, recreation, community improvements; natural resources including agricultural products, minerals and water; markets and climate and other factors.

Telephone Talk

by
CHARLES A. HARRIS
Your Telephone Manager

IF YOU'RE A DOODLER, be careful of the kind of scribblings you leave around while making phone calls. You may give away some personal secrets. According to psychologists, if you doodle animals or birds, you're affectionate and understanding. Squares and checks show logic and emotional stability. Circles mean you're a daydreamer; stairsteps mean you're ambitious.

* * * * *

THIS IS THE NEW TOUCH TONE PHONE . . . with buttons instead of a dial, and musical tones for each signal sent. The new phone has undergone two years of testing, and users are so enthusiastic it will be introduced to the public on a limited basis some time in the next couple of years. One of its chief advantages is faster dialing . . . as one test-user said, "It's like magic!" The Touch Tone Phone—another result of continuing Bell System research and development.

* * * * *

FROM LUXURY TO NECESSITY . . . that's the kind of progress your telephone has made. Back in the late 1800's when telephones were first coming into use, a phone call anywhere at all was a big event! Today, phone calls are as much a part of life as going to work in the morning, or sending the children off to school. A telephone call is no longer a major project! It's simply an easy, pleasant, low-cost way to get things done, keep friendships warm, stay in touch with the world. Use your telephone . . . for all it's worth.

* * * * *

TEEN-AGERS ARE SPECIAL PEOPLE! (Any one of them will be glad to tell you so!) They have special problems and needs and likes and dislikes. If you have teens in your house, why not consider giving them the privacy and sense of importance provided by an extension phone of their very own, and their own personal listing in the telephone directory. It'll be good for them, and the rest of the family, too.

Washington Report

Rep. John C. Watts

A Vote Against Crime

Aroused by last year's unprovoked stabbing at high noon of a secretary kneeling in a church only blocks away from the Capitol dome, the more recent statement of a Civil Service personnel field recruiter citing young peoples' resistance to government employment in the nation's capital because of such prevalent crime, and the fear of visitors to the capital venturing out at night, the House of Representatives this week cast a decisive vote against crime and passed a militant anti-crime bill.

There is no doubt that the situation in Washington has become serious and that some action must be taken. To ensure their own safety, some people have begun studying jujitsu. Recently one of the capital's leading newspapers devoted an entire page to instructing ladies how to carry their purses so as to discourage purse-snatching and then discussed techniques of self-defense. I personally can recall the occasion when Kentucky's esteemed Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and his wife, were yoked in front of one of Washington's good hotels.

Crime in the District reached an all-time high in 1952, with 24,605 serious offenses committed. From January, 1953 until June, 1957, the number of crimes dropped by some 40 percent until the famed "Mallory" decision was handed down. The crime rate then began another upward swing, and by 1962, the number of serious offenses committed reached 22,657. The first six months of this year showed the crime rate up nearly 8 percent over that of the first six months of 1962. According to the FBI report, the District showed an increase of 41 percent in crimes, compared to national increase of 14 percent for the period 1958-1960.

Thus it can be seen why so many members of the House of Representatives felt that they must take some action to ensure the safety of innocent, law-abiding citizens. One of the most important provisions of the bill as passed by the House, would do away with the "Mallory Rule", which invalidates any confession obtained after any appreciable time lapse between a defendant's arrest and his being formally charged. Further, the bill would do away with the so-called "Durham Rule" relating to insanity, and states that henceforth a prisoner could not escape punishment for his wrongdoing on grounds of mental incapacity if the prisoner at the time had the capacity to understand the wrongfulness of his conduct. The bill also provides for the detention of a suspect upon reasonable grounds for as long as 6 hours before placing charges. The bill also strengthened the penalties for certain crimes.

The opposition to the anti-crime measure called the provisions of the bill too drastic. It is true, some of the provisions are quite drastic, but often a drastic situation requires drastic action until cured. With Congress in almost continual session, if the application of the provisions—providing the bill is passed also by the Senate and signed—prove too harsh or constitutional liberties are in jeopardy, it is possible that amendments can be enacted.

I personally believe that it is time that rights of the injured party and society be given greater consideration, and I hope this bill will become law. I want our nation's capital to be safe for Kentuckians and all other persons to visit, and a city that will justly reflect upon our country.

Social Security

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: I am a farmer aged 68 and have paid on Social Security since farmers were first covered. My wife and I spend part of each winter in Florida. Can we get Social Security payments for the months we are away?

ANSWER: It is possible but you and your wife must file applications. This should be done immediately to prevent possible loss of benefits.

Question: Are benefits before age 65 reduced on a monthly basis, or do you have to apply exactly on your 62nd, 63rd, or 64th birthday?

Answer: You can apply any time. The reduction is figured on a monthly basis —for every month that you are closer to 65, the less the reduction.

Question: How much is a wife's benefit reduced at age 62? I am already 65 and my wife wants to draw her benefits.

Answer: The reduction would be 25 percent if she applied in the same month that she reached 62. The nearer she is to 65, the less it is reduced.
