A total of $460,956.97 was spent by the American Red Cross during the fiscal year 1962 to aid disaster victims in Kentucky, Morris Whiteley, chairman of the Nicholas County Chapter, reported this week as final tabulations were completed and made available to chapter chairmen.

As was the case last year, a great portion of this expenditure was in Eastern Kentucky which was struck by devastating floods. The amount spent in this area, Mr. Whiteley reports, was $206,070.00.

"As we all know," Mr. Whiteley said, "Eastern Kentucky is beset with many economic problems and without the help of the American Red Cross, suffering in the area would have been beyond description."

In all, 2044 Kentucky families received disaster aid from the American Red Cross during the past year.

Mr. Whiteley reports that the Nicholas Co. Chapter of the American Red Cross will launch its annual drive for funds to finance Kentucky operations on March 1.
