From the Diary of a Country Editor
by Warren R. Fisher Sr.

THE EARTH AND MAN
A little sun, a little rain,
A soft wind blowing from the west,
And woods and fields are sweet a gain,
And warmth within the mountain breast.
So simple is the earth we tread,
So quick with love and life her frame;
Ten thousand years have dawned and fled,
And still her magic is the same.
A little love, a little trust,
As a soft impulse, a sudden dream—
And life as dry as desert dust
Is fresher than a mountain stream.
So simple is the heart of man,
So ready for new hope and joy;
Ten thousand years since it began
Have left it younger than a boy.
—Stepford A. Brooke.

THIS, THAT AND T'OTHER
A Page From The Diary Of A Country Editor
Up fairly belimes, and find a typical Kentucky morn. of the kind when the piping call of the crow comes clearly across miles of sparkling scrubland, when the padstems are grey with frost, save for steaming patches where fat cattle have slept. On such days the smoke rises like a wispy arrow straight to heaven, one remembers bag-killing and the steaming herd crackling head. Such days in Kentucky did always make me think of the novel England of Pickwick and Sir Roger de Coverley, of kitchen lings with ham and pepper pods, of ruddy,

HAPPY LANDINGS!

(as far as I know) and he still lives in Paris, Ky. Christmas was drawing near. An old lady in Paris was very anxious for her grandson and an orphan boy that boarded in her home to get a few days' furlough, but there was little, if any hope. Both boys had grown up under watchful eye and were great pals. When under the service of his country the other did likewise and luckily they had not been separated. They had given up hope of getting home for Christmas—but one day as she baked a cake she talked to God—'Yes, she would write a letter herself! Her education was limited and her writing worse, but after all the 'big shots' once were boys and would understand. Somehow she knew where to send the letter.

The young men were summoned to report to their officer. Wide-eyed and speechless they stood before the tall, stern man who looked at them and would understand. Somehow she knew where to send the letter.

"Hank" Crump, my cousin's son in Arizona. A veteran of World War II, he had been ill ever since returning from Japan and had spent most of the past year in hospital, critically ill the past three weeks. Burial was in the Military Cemetery at Phoenix, Ariz. December 17. He was the only son of Henry Crump, native of Nicholas County, and a grandson of the late R. W. "Dick" Crump and Armanth's Mannin Crump of the Miller Station neighborhood, who moved to Missouri more than fifty years ago.

Neighborhood Gleanings. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rowlings of High street and Mr. and Mrs. Aca Center Jr. of Brookville, Ohio, left last week for St. Petersburg, Fla. Mr. and Mrs. Rowlings plan to spend the winter there.

Joe Betty suffered a severe asthma attack Christmas night and spent several days at the hospital under the watchful eye of his doctor.

Miss Halley Griffin spent Christmas week in Covington with her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bobb.

Grover Snapp, who is attending God's Bible School in Cincinnati was at home for Christmas.

Mrs. Esther Bogges spent a short Christmas visit with her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Cropper and family, near Flemingsburg.

A Real Soldier. It is often said that it is not what one does, but what he gets by with, that counts. This is a true Christmas story and actually happened during World War I. All participants are gone now, with the exception of one.
