From the Diary of a Country Editor
by Warren R. Fisher Sr.

WINTER
(Sevenson)
In rigorous hours, when down the iron lane...

When all the snowy hills and the bare woods are still; When snipes are silent in the frozen bays...

SNOW
"A prinrose by a river's brim
A yellow prinrose was he him,
And it was nothing more."

"So, silent to the most of us was the fall of the "silence rain"; the feathery crystals of which drifted noiselessly down...

"Backward, low backward, O tide of the year!
I'm no warrer of toll and of tears—
Till without recompense, tears all are valued."

"Take them and give me a child-hood again!"
"Take us back to that little lad with his first sled and his first good coating weather. Give us again the obliging pair of lovers, in their own-sock sleep, who stopped to allow a dozing 'yonder' hand to 'think up'—and then promptly for-

A Little Yappin' by Nellie Crump

VIOLETS UNDER THE SNOW
The nests are all empty of feathers and song. Swarming fat and fat and fat...

Taking Time to Scrap
My small neighbor Rita had not called all day. Just about dark in the rubes...

Still With Snow
"Tommy" Crump, who has delivered orders for several accidents...
