A Little Yappin'

By Nellie Crump

News of the Week.

Mrs. W. F. Gilley has returned home from the hospital.

Mrs. Clarabelle Sapp has returned home from the hospital. Her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Rawlings, and two children of Lexington, have been with her.

Walker Hollar of Bourbon county was dinner guest of Mrs. Harvey Hardwick and Mrs. Anna Wagoner last Thursday. Mr. Hollar was a close friend of the late Harvey Hardwick.

Jerry Davis of the U. S. Navy, Mrs. Davis and their little son spent a few days recently with Jerry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Davis on Morgan street.

The Galyon family visited Miss Doris Cloyd at a hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, recently. She is recovering nicely from major surgery and has returned to her home in Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes Myers and two sons of New Vienna, Ohio, were last weekend guests of his mother, Mrs. Lettie Myers, on East Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Barlow and family of Cynthiana, Mr. and Mrs. David Dooth and Sondra Barlow, Mrs. Emma Barnett and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jacobs all of Carlisle, were visitors in Huntington, W. Va., last Sunday. They also visited Carter Cave.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sugg and Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Burden and family visited Mrs. Sugg's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Eppards, in Shelbyville, Ky., last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Fessenger of Enid, Okla., and friends, Mr. and Mrs. James Letchworth of Marshall, Okla., were guests of Miss Louella Huddleson, Mrs. Mayme Mann and other relatives here the past week. Mrs. Fessenger was formerly Miss Ada Huddleson of Carlisle.

Wesley W. Williams, 86, and his daughter, Mrs. Bertha Williams; great-granddaughter Carol Wooseley; and great-great-granddaughter, Kathy Jo Wooseley; all of Greenfield, Ind., were guests of Nellie Crump Friday afternoon. They were on their way to visit Mrs. Frona Gaither of Mayslick.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Law and two daughters have been attending a nursery convention this week in Houston, Texas.

Make Way, Man.

Trigger Galyon, accompanied by "Cotton" and Becky, was over to visit me for the first time Friday. Noting my open-toe sandal, that pony nipped two of my toes, then had the nerve to actually laugh in my face! He is a spoiled brat. Becky told me that what he wanted was sugar. The nerve!

—Yap—

When Wind Blows.

Several extra large limbs were blown from a tree between Eddie Barbee's shop and the home of Clarabelle Sapp during the windstorm early Saturday morning. K. U. employees were busy for quite a while blazing a trail through.

—Yap—

Before Yesterday.

Such a pleasant surprise was waiting when my phone rang last Thursday morning and the amiable voice of Miss Louella Huddleson said there was someone at her home wanting to see me. All of a sudden the cogs of memory reversed!

It was again 1905-06 and I was a little girl in the Carlisle school with my old classmates. Charles D. Meadows was our teacher.

To make a long story short, this "little friend" was formerly Ada Huddleson, back in Carlisle after 58 years. "Long time no see." Ada is now Mrs. Otto Fessenger of Enid, Okla. Her husband accompanied her here to see relatives and friends and learn how the "old hometown" is coming along. Also they brought along Mr. and Mrs. James Letchworth, friends from Marshall, Okla., on their first visit to Kentucky.

Looking at a picture of the school group taken by B. P. Young in October 1905, it is sad to note that eleven members of the class of 23 boys and girls are known to have passed away, as have Mr. Meadows and Mr. Day who are also shown in the picture. I dare say Mr. Harry Day sharpened more lead pencils than anyone during his lifetime. How he was loved by all. "Helping" him ring the school bell was an experience never to be forgotten.

The known dead class members include Sue Dunn, Emma Durrum, Eugenia Peters, Catherine Trumbo, Virginia Bramblett, Sue Day, Elizabeth Lawless, Miller Burnaugh, Maurice Burnaugh, Nathan Linville, Malcolm Donnell. Most likely there are others. It seemed a bit ironic that Ada Huddleson was here for the burial rites of Bettie Shrout, sister of Emma Durrum, Thursday afternoon.

FARM & HOME

Tobacco Field Day

"Producing a burley crop useful to buyers and consumers must be the main interest of farmers this year," Ira Massie, U-K Tobacco Specialist told Nicholas County growers at a field meeting on the Charles Whaley Farm last week.

"There was considerable spread in price from the low quality leaf to the useful leaf last marketing year," Massie said. "We except considerable spread again in this year's crop. For that reason, here are some steps farmers ought to take to improve the usefulness of this year's crop:

1. Harvest only ripe, mature tobacco; 2. Prime so that the top of the plant will get ripe, thereby increasing income per acre; 3. Top tobacco when fields are in three quarter bloom; 4. Leave two suckers in the top of the plant until harvest time; 5. If you decide to use MH-30 (maleic hydrazide), use it according to instructions; and 6. Sort tobacco into basic grades, i.e. flyings, lugs, B-leaf and tips.

"Probably the most important factor of all is the maturity of the crop at harvest time," Massie emphasized. "If you were raising apples, you wouldn't harvest green, immature apples for sale because you know the consumer would turn them down. Apply the same principle to harvesting tobacco; no consumer would want to smoke a cigarette made of green, immature leaf."

Growers saw an insect control demonstration and compared varieties of tobacco at the Field Day.

The Farmers Federal Gasoline Tax Refund

Farmers may now file for a refund of any federal tax paid on gasoline used on their farms for farming purposes during the period of July 1, 1962, to June 30, 1963. Claims for these refunds must be filed on or before September 30, 1963. The amount of the refund is 4 cents for each gallon of gasoline used. A simple card form, Internal Revenue Service Form 2240, should be used. These cards have been mailed to farmers who filed claims last year. If you need a form, you can get it from an Internal Revenue representative or at the county Extension office.

If gasoline was used on your farm by a custom operator, you are entitled to include this gasoline in your request for refund even though it was bought by the custom operator.

The Federal Gasoline Tax Refund relates in no way to the Kentucky state refund on gasoline. You may file for a federal refund whether or not a dye was used in the gasoline. Remember to file your claim for the Farmers Federal Gasoline Tax Refund on or before the 30th of September.

It's the Season for Salads

This is the time of year salads are most welcome. And with fresh fruits and vegetables occupying much of the U. S. D. A's list of plentiful foods, homemakers have a wide choice of ingredients.

There are all of the many summer vegetables plus watermelons and peaches on the list. Regionally, you'll also find other fruits in good supply. So mix and match these in imaginative summer salads.

Here are a few tips on how to make a salad appetizing and interesting. They come from home economists in USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. Select top quality vegetables and fruits. Not only do these look and taste best, but they provide the best nourishment. Tear greens in fairly large pieces or cut with scissors. Larger pieces of any salad ingredient preserve the food's identity. They also give the salad body.

For variety, use greens other than lettuce—chicory, endive, escarole, watercress.

To prevent wilted or soggy salads, dry the greens. Also, drain any canned foods you might use. Prevent discoloration of light fruits — apples, peaches, bananas—by dipping them in orange, lemon, lime, or pineapple juice.

Chill ingredients before mixing; add salad dressing just before service.

Last of the Big Time Spenders

The United States might well be called the "last of the big time spenders", but like other big spenders of earlier times, if our government doesn't begin to exercise a little more muscle in holding on to its money, our prosperity can't possibly last. Today the dollar (based on the 1939 index) is worth about 45 cents. It would behoove our government to remember that admonition told most little children, "Every penny counts!"

The basic reason for federal taxes is to meet federal expenditures. And federal expenditures are made in accordance with appropriations enacted by law. Certainly federal taxes are too high, but federal appropriations and expenditures are even higher.

In 27 out of the last 33 years, federal expenditures have exceeded the revenue. During this period, the federal debt has increased from $16.2 billion to $304 billion; and interest on the debt has risen from $659 million to $10 billion a year.

When I first came to Washington, I was intrigued by the philosophy that you could spend yourself into prosperity. After observing and studying our government firsthand over the past 12 years, however, I have learned this just is not possible. You may spend all right, but you spend yourself into bankruptcy, not prosperity.

As a member of the Ways and Means Committee, now working on a tax revision bill with the hope of reducing income taxes while obtaining new revenue by tax reform, I am painfully aware of the difficulties encountered in drafting tax legislation. I see our sell-source of money being dried up by our own reckless spending habits.

If we are to straighten our own house, constant and rigid policing against extravagance, waste, and inefficiency, is necessary. All government departments and agencies must be watched for signs of extravagance and waste. I think all of us would agree that an adquate national defense is essential but this does not mean that the military or the Space Agency should be considered sacrosanct. In fact, their operations should be particularly carefully scrutinized as these expenditures represent such a substantial portion of the entire federal budget.

Now, while most members of Congress are making an effort to curb federal fiscal irresponsibility, it must be remembered that 85 percent of the people are clamoring for more and more money out of Washington. Cities, counties and states, all across the nation, want federal aid for all kinds of projects ranging from highways and hospitals to schools and sanitary districts.

No doubt, some of the extravagence is brought about because Congress is unable to resist the demands from home. Like a too-indulgent father who gives his children more than he can really afford, Congress, too, sometimes gives more than it should. Thus, each of us must look to ourselves not to demand more than is reasonable, but to encourage Congress in its efforts to vote for more economy even if it affects our own district. It is not possible to always vote economy for the other person and never for ourselves.

I know that the citizens of the Sixth District would certainly welcome more economy and efficiency in our government.
