But water apartments have a long way to go before they can begin being regarded as exceptionally safe structures. There have been at least 44 reported drownings in the state of Kentucky this far this year, according to Bill King, director of the State Public Safety Department's Boating Division.

The Boating Division has zoned five lakes for all water-sport enthusiasts: Herrington, Nolin, Rough River, Buckhorn, and Dewey. In addition, the Department of Fish and Wildlife has constructed 28 smaller lakes over which it has exclusive zoning rights.

King says his zoning concept is to attempt to install a "share-the-waters" idea among the various lakes so that neither the skier, the boater, the fisherman, scuba diver, nor swimmer will have an advantage over the other and so that each can enjoy, to the fullest, his favorite sport in maximum safety.

Zoning the smaller lakes in Kentucky is the only practical solution for safety and pleasure.

You can help your child prevent a bicycle accident. First, be sure you know the safety rules, then review them with him. Encourage him to observe the rules at all times. Practice what you preach and be sure that you observe all of these safety rules also. Your child often imitates your actions and attitude on safety, so set a good example for him.

YOUTHS CAR BURNS

The Nicholas County Fire Department was called at 11:30 a. m. Thursday. The car of Charles House burned at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George House on Moorefield Road.

Zoning Our Lakes For Safety

More and more frequently heard the words "People just don't seem to have the respect for others that they used to have." In particular the most recent comment like this that we heard was a reference to water enthusiasts.

Probably nowhere else is the Golden Rule more applicable today than on the lakes and rivers where thousands of boaters, fishermen, skiers, skin divers, and swimmers vie for space to enjoy themselves on a hot day.

Water enthusiasts have made more progress toward the elusive goal of reasonable safety when compared to highway traffic safety, because it seems that the very idea of being in the water quickly brings to mind the realistic dangers of being drowned.
