Conservation Essay Winners Given Awards; Stories Quoted

Soil Conservation Essay Winners of Nicholas County High School were presented awards recently by Wm. F. Threlkeld of the Soil Conservation Service and Frank Henry, Secretary-Treasurer of the Nicholas County Soil Conservation District.
Susan Small realized the value of soil and water conservation as she wrote "A priceless service which people seldom think about is the protection a forest gives those other two life-giving resources, soil and water."
Brenda Beck sees more than commercial value. She wrote "In the spring we appreciate them as we stop to think of them again in summer we realize their value as shade when its 93 degrees above in the fall, there's no sight quite as beautiful as the turning leaves of red, yellow and brown color. In winter, we couldn't get along without that cedar tree. Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas without them. For these reasons we strive to preserve our forests by means of conservation."
Harry Feeback realizes forests help reduce soil erosion and help control floods by reducing runoff.
Linda Marsh knows trees are not only needed to provide shade, but they are also needed to provide oxygen for the world.
