Washington Report

By John Watts

From Your Congressman Kentucky On The Map

Kentucky has always been on the map, but this time it is being mapped in 750 quadrangles, and when the job is completed all the Commonwealth's geological and geographical secrets will be public knowledge!

The Kentucky Geological Survey is working cooperatively with the U. S. Geological Survey of the Department of the Interior to reveal the earth's secrets hidden in Kentucky soil. This definitive geological mapping program will provide an important tool for the systematic exploration and future progressive development of Kentucky's tremendous natural resources. Although the industries related to agriculture, forestry and minerals will appear to be the first affected, every segment of the economy will be benefitted.

As each quadrangle of the state is carefully mapped, it's detailed knowledge aids soil scientists and agriculturists in soil conservation planning land utilization and soil conservation programs, as well as providing essential knowledge for locating and developing mineral wealth. Already there has been what literally might be called a 'concrete" example of beneficial results. This has been the location of gypsum, an important nonmetallic mineral used in the building industry in wallboard, building plaster and cements. Further, published maps of the quadrangle surveys have pointed out other mineral commodities such as clay, coal, limestone and shale. I understand the mapping of fault patterns, structure contours and limestone reefs are also helping to encourage and guide the exploration of minerals, thus effecting future development of Kentucky's coal, petroleum and natural gas resources.

Some results on agriculture have been recorded, too. As a result of the survey, one tobacco farmer was advised to change his tobacco plantings from a silty and clay soil area of his farm to an area where the soil was predominantly limestone. It was reported that this change resulted in an increase of 500 pounds of tobacco without additional fertilizer or extra treatment.

One of the most interesting results of the survey has been the location of a crater-like depression of 8,000 feet in diameter, 3-½ miles northeast of Versailles, which they believe may have been formed by the impact of a meterite. The structure, exposing limestone rock more than 400 million years old, is high in the center and depressed around the rim. The crater is bound by blocks of surrounding rocks that have slipped downward toward the depression and on the east rim they have been gently bent and twisted in what geologists call folds.

As the survey of each quadrangle is completed, Kentucky's geological secrets continue to be revealed, and they help guide in the future development of our state. This survey also provides an excellent example of the State and Federal governments working cooperatively in an effort which will benefit all of us.

4H Calendar

Drive Underway

The annual 4-H birthday calendar drive is now underway and all Nicholas County citizens are asked to participate.

Listings that can be included in the calendar are birthdays, anniversaries, sport events such as baseball and basketball games, family reunions and other important events that may be of interest to local citizens.

The price of each listing will be 25¢. Calenders may purchased for 50¢ each, (calendars will be available in October or early November).

These calendars will be helpful in several ways such as a gift for friends who have moved away, reminders of important dates of events and activities.

Money that is raised by this drive will go to help complete our camp quota which is still in excess of $1000.

When a club member approaches you for a listing and to sell you a calender, remember you are joining in a very worthy program so don't refuse.

RECC BILLS LOWERED

When the 529 Fleming-Mason RECC members in Nicholas County pay their electric bill this month, they will be paying approximately 6 per cent less. This will effect all types of service offered.

Recently the Public Service Commission granted the Co-op approval of their application for a rate reduction totaling $59,600 annually.

Member-owners of the electric cooperative have received, or will receive, in the near future, new billing cards containing the rate reductions and credit for greater convenience. Since Fleming-Mason RECC is a member-owner organization, members voted several years ago to read their own meters which has created great savings in time, man power and money.

F-M COOP MEET ...P-1

Flemingsburg—The stage is set for the 26th annual meeting of Fleming-Mason Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation which will be held Monday, July 20, at the RECC farm about one mile from Flemingsburg on route 32. The annual meeting is always the highlight of the year for the 8,500 members of the member-owned cooperative and a large crowd is expected.

The meeting which will begin at 6 p.m. will include the election of three directors; a progress and financial report for the year; the selection and crowning of "Miss Fleming-Mason RECC"; awarding of several door prizes and entertainment by professional performers.

Albert Dicken, president of the cooperative, will preside.

BAPISTS MAP STRATEGY FOR WORK IN MOUNTAINS

The 10th annual Mountain Missions Conference will open Monday, July 20 on the Campus of Oneida Baptist Institute, Oneida, Kentucky. The week long conference is open to all Baptist pastors, missionaries, and their families, who work in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. Conferees will seek better methods for strengthening Baptist life in the mountains through workshops, panel discussions, films, lectures, and messages.

Periodical

Cicada Pest

Emerging Now In State

The pestiferous, well-known cicada—often erroneously referred to as the 17-year-locust is back again.

The insect has made themselves known, says R. L. Miller, UK Ag Extension Service entomologist, by their extremely noisy songs that mark their appearance.

But their noise isn't the only annoyance. They will damage young trees, nursery stock and ornamental shrubs. The female lays its eggs in twigs or small branches of these trees, piercing the branch to deposit eggs. They kill or severely damage such limbs by by their actions.

This pest stays underground for 13 or 17 years, depending on its species. There are different broods of these, though, that can come on in different years.

Control measures: Use two tablespoonfuls of 50 percent strength wettable powder of Sevin in one gallon of water. Spray this into branches of young fruit trees, ornamentals, nursery stock, etc. Sevin should give effective control for about three weeks when so used.

MEETING TO BE HELD FRIDAY

The Licking Valley Protective Association will meet Friday, July 17, at 8 p. m. at the Bracken County Court House in Brooksville.

UTOPIA CLUB FAIR SCHEDULED AUGUST 13-15

Dorsey Lynn Watkins, president of the Nicholas County Utopia Club, and Donald Smith, chairman of the 1964 Nicholas County Youth Fair, announced that the fair will be held Aug. 13-15.

Committees for different activities will be appointed later.

HARRISON RECC MEET JULY 21 AT 6 P.M.

The Harrison County Rural Electric Cooperative will meet Tuesday night, July 21, at the cooperative farm, Highway 982, ½ mile south of Cynthiana.

Sue Irvin Says Language Barrier Lowered By Music

Sue Irvin of Nicholas County Kentucky's 1964 International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE) delegate, is now living with rural families in Norway. Her first host family lived near Biri, a three-hour drive from Oslo.

Sue will live with Norwegian families for about six months, taking part in their everyday activities. A former 4-H Club member, she finished her junior year at Morehead State College before leaving for Norway in June.

"Everyone here—my family and their neighbors—is quite familiar with 'My Old Kentucky Home'," she writes, "so we stand around the piano and sing it in English. Then we always end with the Norwegian national anthem. Even though language has been somewhat of a barrier, I'm beginning to understand some Norwegian — and we can meet on common ground with music."

Since Sue has majored in music education in college, Norwegian music is of special interest to her. "I've already learned some folk songs from my nine-year-old host sister," she writes.

"I will go to the National 4-H Camp this week. I certainly look forward to it because I have always enjoyed camp work. Martin Moe, my contact here in Norway, is a recreational director and I should learn a lot from being with him at the Camp and seeing him work.

"Norway is so very beautiful that it nearly takes my breath every time I look outside at the mountains and water." Sue concludes. "I can see that it will be a great experience within itself to tell about the country and my experiences with my hosts when I return home."
