Plant Spring Flowering Bulbs Now

If you have not already done so, now is the time to plant spring flowering bulbs. Tulips, narcissus, and hyacinths should be planted in a fairly rich, well drained soil. The soil should be dug up and mixed thoroughly at least 8-10 inches deep. Bone meal or 20% superphosphate is a satisfactory fertilizer for most bulbs (apply it at the rate of 1 lb. to every 25 sq. ft. at the time of soil preparation).

Prevent Injury to Shade Trees

Damage to bark on the southwest side of tree trunks is caused mostly by rapid and extreme temperature changes as the sun sets in the winter. As the late afternoon sun shines on the trunks of the tree, winter burn often occurs. The trees grow and the bark flakes or ridges and the limbs above begin to shade the trunk below, the tendency to winter burn decreases and less damage occurs.

The trunks of tall set trees and other young trees should be wrapped to prevent the winter burn injury. Any wrap can be used which will outlast the winter and not harm the trunk.

The trunks of trees should not be painted or whitewashed. Whitewashing and painting does reflect the sun and may reduce winter injury to the tree. In appearance and some paints may kill the trees sometimes to the extent of killing the trees.

Fruit Show Reported Excellent

Professor C. S. Walman reports that the 1964 Fruit Show at the Kentucky State Fair was one of the best ever held in the history of state fair exhibits. The reason being a year of bountiful fruit production. Fruits were well developed and beautifully colored and free of disease and insect injury. The classes entered by new exhibitors showed the interest which is being taken by some of our younger generation in growing high quality fruits.

If you did not attend the fair and see the beautiful displays of fruit, you missed a treat, they were really attractive and mouth watering beauties.

Crew Leader Named For Ag. Census

Elsie J. Kearns of Paris has been named a crew leader for the 1964 Census of Agriculture. She is the regional director of the regional office of the U. S. Bureau of the Census at Detroit, announced today. The new crew leader is one of about 1828 persons throughout the U. S. to receive this appointment. The new crew leader will supervise a team of census enumerators who will visit all farms and ranches in Nicholas, Bourbon, and part of Clark county to collect official census questionnaires from farm operators. Enumeration of all farms in the county will take place in November and early December.

The census will be taken in the following way: Shortly after November 5, the Bureau enumerator comes to the farm to collect them. At that time, the enumerator will help answer any questions that may have proved troublesome.

The crew leader is a key person in conducting the Census of Agriculture. He recruits and trains the enumerators, schedules their work, reviews the accuracy of completed forms, and conducts difficult interviews.

The Census of Agriculture is taken every five years in years ending in "4" and "9" to gather information on the nation's agricultural resources and production. This information vital in making decisions affecting many segments of the U. S. economy. Data gathered include the number and size of farms, acreage and harvest of crops, livestock inventories, and information on farm equipment and improvements and income and production expenditures.

The information will be published starting in 1965 for counties, states, and the nation.

An Informed Electorate

Get-out-the-vote campaigns have been a part of national elections for a great many years. Of late, however, something new and eminently worthwhile has been added. More and more of these campaigns stress that it is the duty of the voter to seriously and thoroughly study the issues and candidates before entering the polling booth.

An uninformed voter is worse than no vote at all. The policies and principles that are adopted now, with the consent of the electorate, are those which will do much to determine this nation's future. They will, in many instances, profoundly affect the lives and opportunities of our children and our children's children. It cannot too often be repeated that an informed people is the first asset to the perpetuation of our institutions and our freedoms.

By all means, vote—the fact that so many Americans do not vote so commonly says away from the polls has long been a national disgrace. But, above all, really know what and who you are voting for.

Rep. John C. Watts Deserves Re-Election (The Paris Daily Enterprise)
Results of the November 3rd election should reflect the admiration and respect that the people of the Sixth District hold for Congressman John Watts. This dedicated public servant has consistently fought for the welfare of his constituents without disregarding his obligations to the nation. So effectively has Mr. Watts balanced his duties that district voters have many times re-elected him while his Washington colleagues have placed him on the powerful Ways and Means Committee, Congress' only elected committee.

Only at election time do we have the opportunity to collectively express our regard for those who serve us well in elective offices. We trust Central Kentuckians will give Rep. Watts a tremendous majority, a victory in direct proportion to the able representation he has given them for fourteen years.

Building Business Advertising Creates Demand Provides Jobs For Thousands

A home which sells for $15,000 in Texas or Iowa would cost $30,000 in France. It would cost $20,000 in Italy.
The difference in cost of homes in southern Europe and the United States can be traced largely to efficiency in construction techniques.
Semi-automated home building was made possible by mass demand for good, new housing. Creation of this demand has been a major accomplishment of local newspaper advertising during the past fifteen years.
"Today, I can sell a $20,000 home to people who would not consider paying more than $7,000 for a home in 1950. It wasn't the money, it just took people a long time to realize that they could enjoy the benefits of the more costly investment," one of the nation's leading home builders asserts.
"Of course, advertising was essential—big, hard-selling advertisements, week after week, year after year," he added. "That advertising has helped

From the Diary of a Country Editor

by Warren R. Fisher Jr.
Planting For Posterity

To us there was something of mystery, of "old forgotten things," pictures of the past, racial memories speaking perhaps, in the majesty of two giant pines trees on the lawn of an old country home recently. How many years must have elapsed to give that burly girth of trunk, that towering sweep of branches!
All about stood "a brotherhood of venerable trees," stately veterans of countless battles with winter winds and steers and summer's heat. Victors still in the never-ceasing conflict with the elements, sturdy descendants of one tender sapling, a new forest once upon a time, planted, tended and protected with loving care.
But the pines dominated them all with their ancient air of graceful maturity, meeting the wind with whispering boughs, majestic, quiet, aloof, symbolic in their ever-living verdancy of man's highest hope. Small wonder that the evergreen had become the emblem of immortality to the human heart.
One wondered if the man whose hand set them there realized that he could not hope, in the brief span of his years, to enjoy the full beauty of their maturity. Perhaps he did realize it, but found a compensating comfort in
