the great equalizer-

RURAL ELECTRICITY
 More than any other single factor, electricity has helped to "equalize" living conditions in rural America with those in urban America. In addition to the labor-saving devices now in use on the farm, all rural families are able to enjoy the benefits and comforts made possible through electricity.
 Modern industries, once confined to the big cities, have sprung up around the countryside, helping provide jobs and income to keep the wheels of commerce turning. It is because of electricity that the rural family can enjoy the same conveniences and comforts as the city family. It is because of electricity that the rural family can enjoy the same conveniences and comforts as the city family. AND THIS IS WHAT THEY SAW.—This is inside Great Industries plant in Carlisle where 500 people saw these machines make mens' briefs, boxer shorts, etc. shirts, and athletic supporters, women's panties, sanitary belts and briefs. The crowd attending the open house was taken through the front door, led by E.C. Theodoros through the plant where they saw the operation, from the cutting to the finished product being placed in boxes for shipment. The part of the plant shown here is the sewing section.—Elder photo
