Heavy Nitrogen Fertilization. Heavy applications of nitrogen fertilizers to tobacco fields makes the soils become more acid, says Ira Massey, U. K. Ag Extension Service tobacco specialist. For that reason, tobacco fields ought to be soil-sampled and if it can be done this month and checked for the acidity (pH) level. If the acidity level is not correct, the ground limestone still can be applied to help correct this condition before the 1965 crop is set out. Massey notes that in an experiment last season, heavy application of nitrogen put the soil acidity during the growing period, to a 50-

When the Kentuckians were swamped by Tennessee in money Knoxville recently Saturday, those watching the game saw a looklike Kentucky team.

"This team doesn't look like a Kentucky team," a former UK letter winner said. "I don't mean because they haven't got a big man, they work on, I mean they're not cohesive. They don't have any fire. They let Tennessee push them all over the floor, and I don't see one guy get mad. Why, I remember one year down here Allen Pelchans chased Ed Elliott the length of the court when he lost his temper under the basket, but not this team. They just take it."

Whenever a team goes bad everybody has the reason. Kentucky's lack of fire has been their shortcoming for sure. A former UK all American, Wallace "Wah Wah" Jones opines that this is the reason they have lost most of the games in the last ten minutes of the game. "They're, so small," says Wah, "they have to work so hard to get the rebounds that they just run out of gas late in the game." Bob Polk, who

Farming is fast becoming an exacting business with much thought and planning required to make all phases of the total farm harmonious and to give the greatest dollar profit possible per acre. One in the day when one can at the last moment, without planning, decide to

Perhaps you are not familiar with the mechanics of a soils map. Upon request, the Soil Conservation Service Soil Scientist, working with the local Soil Conservation District, will come to your farm. He will take soil borings in each field to determine the "soil type" degree of erosion, steepness, and susceptibility to future erosion. When all of this information is returned to you, it will be carefully
