

TROTS

The brand new automobile accelerates gradually along the tawny surface of the track, the brilliant lights overhead picking up highlights from its polished finish.

The eight gleaming horses also increase their speed, their harness clicking rhythmically and the tires of the sulley they pull purr crisply on the track.

The night drivers emit encouraging calls that sound like "uh-uh" as the horses near the starting post.

Slightly the wide wings that extend on either side of the open car restraining the eager horses, hold forward as the car speeds to the outer rail, and the grandstand crowd cries in unison, "They're in!"

That is all part of the nightly scene of harness racing, a favorite sport for Lexington, Ky. Trotting Track. Whose weekly season runs from April 27 through June 12.

There are nine races each night, clear or rain, except Sunday and Monday with post-time eight o'clock.

The Lexington track, known for decades as the "Big Red Mile," upon which numerous world record times have been established, has inaugurated a plan whereby groups of 25 to 350 persons can be entertained in luxurious surroundings while enjoying an evening of thrilling sport.

Plan Three calls for deluxe governor's dinner in the Red Mile Clubhouse, and reserved box seats after dinner admitted to remain at the tables throughout the evening, at a cost of $4 per person. Party time is 6:30 p.m.

Plan Two entitles the party to dinner in the clubhouse, and reserved box seats after dinner at a charge of $4. In each plan, one of the races is named after the particular group being entertained.

Plan One calls for a grandstand party in the reserved area, with complete beverage and snack service available, at $1.50 per person. In addition, the Sulky Room Buffet is open each race night at 6 p.m.
