How To Fix That Plant Bed

Nicholas County Farmers were busy last week preparing tobacco plant beds. Several methods were used for aeration. Burning continues to be the most popular method used in the county. If done properly as shown by Carl Amberg and Harvey Waggoner, it is very effective in controlling weeds. Amberg is tenant on the Waggoner farm.

(2) Another method used by Methyl Bromide in popularity is Methyl Bromide. Tommy Grimes is shown using the hot method. He heats water in a tank and places the bed of charcoal burning in a large container.

(3) Also treating a bed with Methyl Bromide are William Bartlett and Robert Bartlett on the Hinton Caswell Farm. They have treated 600 feet of plant beds with this method. Bartlett's letters grow 7 1/2 acres of barley.

(4) Plant beds may also be prepared in the fall as more producers are doing. Several beds were prepared on the Clay Seed Farm using various methods of preparation and covered with plastic and seed a year in advance. Some of the beds have been needed and the cotton cover applied.

Pick Fertile, Well-Drained Land For This Season's Barley Crop

Since tobacco is a high-value crop using a small percentage of the farm's land, the best available field should be picked for each year's planting.

Take the most fertile and well-drained areas, says Ira Massee, U. K. Ag. Extension Service specialist. "Building up the fertility level and soil structure of the field to be used takes time and patience—but large yields of usable barley can be secured this way."

The field should have good drainage of surface and sub-surface. This helps aerate the crop.

Good soil structure is important; such soils will hold moisture well for dry periods.

"Good soil and drainage are highly important. Rapid growth, especially in the early part of the growing season, is needed to produce the thin, grainy, good-color grades wanted at market. Some of the finest barley crops are made in 85 days or less growing time to get such rapid growth the soil must be able to supply large amounts of nutrients and water in a relatively short time. Barley is definitely a crop that needs the best soil for top results," Massee said.
