

One "Whole" Of A Player

Rick Norton stood taller in defeat. An untalented Kentucky team fell to its lottier perch Saturday in Auburn, Alabama, as the host Auburn Tigers pounded the Wildcats 23 to 18. It would have been a complete rout except for senior quarterback Rick Norton. He stood up in the face of charging Auburn linemen, took tremendous physical abuse, and threw three long touchdown passes that kept Kentucky in the game to the bitter end. Norton passed for 269 yards against Auburn. A phenomenal afternoon for any quarterback in any game. Kentucky lost, and Norton undoubtedly will get little recognition for "whole" of a player.

Norton, throughout his career at UK, has probably been the most underrated player in the Southeastern Conference history. At Lexington, he passed for the third most yards for a quarterback in the Southeastern Conference history. At Lexington, he passed for the third most yards for a quarterback in the Southeastern Conference history.
