The Bond Issue and Nicholas County

It seems to the Editors of this newspaper that the people in Nicholas County should give more than a passing thought to the shrewdly conceived "YES" on the Bond Issue at the November Election, November 2. Each year Kentucky pays several million dollars in Federal income taxes to Washington, and now we have a "golden opportunity" to get 860 Million Dollars of our money back to work in Kentucky. To do this, we must vote "YES" for 179 Million.

What does this do for us in Nicholas County? Well, for one thing, we can continue to see our county roads improved even further. Also, more than 100 million dollars will be spent on further improvements on county systems, and certainly our school system share the same funds. Even more realistic, and of immediate concern is the fact that our new Regional Library can become a reality as part of the bond issue money is to be allotted for library construction.

This program is even broader than many of us first realized as it will include money for Agricultural purposes, such as the building of agricultural research and marketing facilities. Yes, this is an important time in the lives of Nicholas Countians to stand up and be counted for progress. Go to the polls Tuesday, November 2, and give the bond issue a resounding favorable "YES" vote.

That City Election

Into the political arena three new comers have tossed their "hats." They are Clifton Wough, seeking the office of Mayor, a post that probably brings a person more criticism than praise, and from a monetary standpoint little reward for the effort expended. The same may be said for the post of Councilman. New seekers of this post are Licha Frazar, Richard J. Hunt, and Gayle B. Owen. They, along with the incumbents Clarence Cord, Dan Rich, Joe Croach, Kash Grimes, Paul Carrett, Teddy Poe and the present Mayor William Power, are all worthy of your careful, intelligent consideration.

All are successful in their chosen fields of endeavor.

One point to remember—only six Councilmen can be selected from a field of nine. These six men will serve you for the next two years.

In the Mayor's race, your choice will be in office for four years.

For better or worse—be sure you can honestly say, "I voted!"

Things Have Changed

Things seem to have changed so far as repeal of section 140(b) of the Fair-Hartley Act is concerned. This is the section that permits the states to pass right-to-work laws forbidding compulsory union membership, and 19 have done so. The repeal bill, backed by the Administration and considered a number 1 priority by organized labor, passed the House. The general belief was that the Senate would concur.

But now reports from Washington say there are grave doubts that the bill will come to a Senate vote this year. The rank and file of the opponents have stiffened. Extended debate is promised.

Public opinion, as various polls attest, backs the right-to-work principle. It doesn't do this because it is against organized labor or the union movement. It does do it because it believes that the right of a man to join or not to join any organization, as he so decides without coercion, is a fundamental freedom.

Let the union gain and hold their membership on the basis of good service—not with the use of an indefensible power which permits them to tell a man he must join and pay tribute, or enter the ranks of the unemployed.

Into which silence comes an ancient man, to collect his time for our picnicking. And I would have him join me in a cup of coffee, but he will not, saying he had drunk one at dinner. Which strikes me as most worthy abstemiousness and perhaps I may learn it with the passing of the years. And doubtless will, if fate be kind, for I heard a cynical fellow say the other day that virtue is but the death of desire. In which saying, no doubt, there is a modicum of truth and many ancients to press themselves upon a virtue that is of age alone and not from choice. And I seek to engage mine hole in conversation, thinking the election a common ground, but he will not commit himself, possibly more interested in the cure served by the late autumn and the possibility of coal veins in the elly hills facting so. But at length he says that it matters little to him who is elected, so long as he be a good man. To which reply might have been made that such depends upon the point of Frankfort, Ky.—Outcome of races in Jefferson and Fayette Counties next month may be important factors in the 1967 gubernatorial race.

Republican County Judge Marlow Cook is liked well in Jefferson and apparently has a better than even chance to win re-election. At the same time he will be an important influence in helping liberal Kenneth Schmedel to win the mayoralty race.

In Fayette County State Representative Joe Johnson is running against Democrat Sherrett Ed Ham for the judgeship.

The next Central Kentucky Feeder Calf Sale will be held Wednesday, November 3, at the Paris Stockyards. Nicholas County producers who have calves from best cows and purebred beef bulls and want to sell cooperatively should take them to the yards on Tuesday, the day before the sale. Calves will be vaccinated at the yards. Several of our farmers are planning to take part. Questions regarding the sale can be answered by one of the county committees: Harvey Waggoner, Harold Letson, Frank Terrell, Fred Whaley or Edgar Allen Darrell or the Extension agents.

Two very important activities for 4-Hers have been scheduled. The annual 4-H officers training meeting for all Nicholas County 4-H Club officers will be held on Saturday, November 6, 10:00 to 12:00 a.m. More details will be published later.

The 1965 4-H Talent Show is set club leaders are asked to start planning the club and specialty acts for their 4-H Clubs. Last year all 4-H Clubs in the county participated and we hope to have 100 per cent participation again this year.

A lot of excellent 4-H opportunities go wanting each year because we do not have enough adult leaders to assist club members.

4-H is one of the oldest youth organizations in existence today with more than 21 1/2 million members in the U.S. alone.

You can serve a very important role by serving as a 4-H leader, working with boys and girls in projects and activities. Contact Theresa S. Lucas, Jr., Nicholas County 4-H Agent, for further details.

The approach of cool weather drives certain insects into boxes for the winter. The boxelder bug is one of the more troublesome insects that seek to hibernates indoors, according to Dr. Richard Miller, UK Extension entomologist.

As the weather gets cooler, boxelder bugs leave their host tree, the boxelder, and collect by the hundreds on the trunk of the tree, on fence posts, on the sunny side of houses, and in large clusters on the ground. They often enter homes through windows, ventilators, and other openings in the home.

Although they do not bite or sting, they're bothersome to have around. In addition to causing trouble at this time of year, they also come out of hiding on warm winter days, retreating again when it turns cold.

The boxelder bug has sucking mouth parts with which it sucks the juice of boxelder leaves. It is about 1/2 inch long and brownish-black with three red lines behind the head and red markings along the wings. The young bugs are bright red.

To control these pests, Miller suggests using a pyrethrin aerosol spray (metal can) inside the house. Direct it on the bugs. Although this doesn't always kill them, it stuns them long enough so they can be collected and destroyed. This type of spray leaves little or no residue.

Outside the house, spray the bugs' nesting places or the bugs themselves with Chlordane (45 per cent concentrate) mixed at the rate of 1 cup concentrate per gallon of water. Or, you can use DDT (25 per cent concentrate) 1 1/2 cups per gallon of water, instead of the Chlordane. Be sure to check the sunny side of the house for these pests.

Rolls Oats Cookie Mix
4 cups flour
4 cups rolled oats, quick cooking
1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
1/4 cup baking powder
1 tablespoon salt

1-1/2 cups shortening
Oatmeal Cookies
2-1/2 cups rolled oats mix
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup raisins
1/3 cup raisins

Stir dry ingredients together until well mixed. Cut in fat until well blended. Add eggs, salt, and cinnamon can. Knead lightly closed in a cool place. Use the mix within a month. Makes about 10 cups mix.

Combine all ingredients and stir just enough to moisten dry ingredients. Drop the dough by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees F. (Mod. oven) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 24 cookies.

You'll find this recipe a money-saver as well as a time-saver. The use of nonfat dry milk helps cut costs.
