WE RECENTLY HEARD THIS STORY ABOUT A 14-YEAR-OLD whose parents promised she could have her very own Princess telephone. As soon as the phone was installed she invited all her friends over for an "inauguration ceremony." Being teen-agers they came prepared for anything and everything. They brought hair curlers, magazines, knitting, games, and, of course, lots of food to while away the time as they waited their turn to talk. The mother of the house was surprised when she peeked into the room, to see long faces and hear complete silence. The explanation? "There's nobody to call. We're all here!" Whether this story is true or not, it is true that the teen-ager at your house would love a phone of her own! Just mention it and see her eyes light up!

OCTOBER HAS BEEN A MONTH OF IMPORTANT "FIRSTS." Here are just a few. The world's first two-way long distance telephone conversation over an outdoor wire was made by Alexander Graham Bell and Thomas Watson between Cambridgeport and Boston, Massachusetts on October 9, 1876. Thomas A. Edison made the first electric incandescent lamp in October, 1879. And on October 21, 1915, the first trans-Atlantic telephone call was made from Arlington, Virginia to Paris, France.
