Mountain Section Sometimes Celebrates Two Christmases

Christmas comes but once a year, as saying with a twinkle in the eye. "Surest thing you know, there's only one Christmas a year." Great Britain and most of the American colonies officially accepted the "new" Gregorian Calendar in 1752, but many people felt that the true date for Christmas had been lost. To this day a number of Kentucky's mountaineers have remained a month's untouched since the introduction of the Gregorian Calendar. Christmas as reckoned on the Julian Calendar, introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, was a day that was a month and a day ahead of the Gregorian Calendar.
