NINE-IN-TWENTY
Kentucky's Wildcat have been on a relentless schedule, moving some of the nation's best basketball teams. National prestige is on the line in every tipoff. The competition is fierce, the game exciting, but when Kentucky wins one of these games it's only a game, a chance to make the elite "top tier" in the wire service polls. The Cats that really count are the games in the Southeastern conference. It takes a league title to go to the N.C.A.A. tournament, and that's what the season is all about. The Cats are currently in a hot streak, having won four of five games. The Wildcats open their season Saturday night in Lexington against Florida. The Gators bring the tallest team in the league to Lexington to face the conference's smallest outfit. Florida has a new head coach in Tommy Harrel, a former assistant coach at Tennessee. This disciple of coach Ray Meyer's "low down" type of play has a wealth of material on hand. The Gators have a returning all-conference performer in 6'9" Gary Keller, called the greatest player in the school's history. As running man for the towering Keller, Florida can choose from a pair of 6'10 players and three 6'6". Florida will average 4 inches taller per man under the basket when the Gators meet Kentucky, the biggest edge the Wildcats can give away this season. Florida is a dominant one-tender for the Southeastern Conference championship, and the winner of Saturday's game will take an early giant step forward in the league race. Kentucky won't take the floor again until January 5, when the Wildcats enter their Vanderbilt, a Kentucky win over Florida Saturday would tie the Wildcats for the S.C. lead for several weeks. A loss would drop them into a tie for the collar. There's no in-between.

Dear Santa, My mother is writing this for me for you see on Christmas Eve I will be 8 months old. My mother says what I need most is little squeaky toys and fuzzy animals. But I would like a Mother Goose Mobile, Snowsuit, a fire truck, a little red wagon filled with blocks, some little toys that roll, a musical Mother in the Shoe. Santa please don't forget Miss Ad. She told me the other day she hoped Santa brought her a purse. Please don't forget my Mama and Papa and my other Papa who
