Planning Ahead

Harry Galbraith of the Headquarters community built diversion channels last fall to divert runoff water from the hills from his tobacco land. Diversion channel construction is limited to bulldozers, usually Galbraith seemed to think that anything a bulldozer could do, he could do better—up to a point.

Galbraith, who has a base of about 400 acres. This will permit the growing of row crops on the back side of the ridge.

Thick fescue in the channel will divert the water to a disposal area, soil erosion will be greatly reduced, and the crop will be protected.

The engineering, design and layout was done by the Soil Conservation Service. It was cost-sharing program under the Agricultural Conservation Program. Farmers may confer with these agencies for advice on conservation problems.

policy to justify granting of leave with pay. Howard Livingston, board chairman, referred to a letter from John Angelis which was read at a previous meeting in which Mr. Angelis claimed an unpaid amount. The board did not take this matter up but on motion by Let-
