Why Catholics Believe As They Do

It's not a set of rules that keeps your Catholic neighbor going to church.

It is a matter of conscience... a self-imposed sense of duty dictated by his reason enlightened by faith.

To be a Catholic, of course, one must conform to the rules and standards of the Church. Anyone doing less would obviously be a member in name only — in the Church as in any other organization or society.

Your Catholic neighbor most likely goes to church much oftener than the rules of the Church require. He could "get by," for example, by confessing his sins and receiving Holy Communion only once a year, and by attending Mass on days which are obligatory — Sundays and Holy Days.

But many Catholics receive the Eucharist as often as once a month, once a week—even every day. Some attend Mass much more often than required. And when Catholics take part in a novena, say the Stations of the Cross, pray the rosary or participate in the various special devotions of the Church, it is not because they have to do so. They do so by choice — for the enrichment of their spiritual lives.

Religion to a Catholic is not merely a worthy and virtuous activity. It is not something a man can take or let alone. It is an absolute duty required not only by the rules of the Church, but by God Himself.

The Church, we believe, is the divinely-instituted channel through which we acknowledge our dependence upon God—the means by which we express our love, faith and gratitude. It is also the channel through which we receive the Sacramental graces instituted by Jesus Christ for the enrichment of our spiritual lives and the salvation of our souls. Believing this as we do... and remembering Christ's command to "... hear the church"... we are compelled by our conscience and reason to worship as we do.

If you would like to know more about the solid reasons behind Catholic beliefs and worship, let us send you a copy of our interesting, pocket-size pamphlet on the subject. It covers such topics as Faith and Common Sense, The Human Soul Will Never Die, Religion Is Our Duty, Christ Left Us a Church, This is Christ's Church, and Without God Nothing Makes Sense. We will send your copy free and without obligation. And nobody will call on you. Write today... ask for Pamphlet No. KC-10.
