Crops Damaged By May Cold

Lexington — Fruit crops in 10 Eastern and Midwestern states were damaged by the May 9-11 freeze, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Crop Reporting Service.
Temperatures during this period ranged from 10 to 16 degrees in Michigan and 20 degrees in North Carolina's mountain areas. Crop damage from this unseasonably cold weather probably will have considerable effect on prices of some fruits later this year.
Preliminary reports show that Michigan's fruit crops were hardest hit by the low temperatures, the Crop Reporting Board noted. Frost here caused severe damage to the peach crop, sharply reduced cherry prospects, and damaged the apple crop. Michigan is the nation's top source of sour cherries and is a major producer of peaches and apples.
Damage to fruit here in Kentucky ranged from about 10 to 75 percent, depending on the section of the state, according to Carl Chaplin, UK Agricultural Experiment Station horticulturist, Lexington, Sunday, May 22, at Blue Grass Post Office for the election of officers. The following

The president asked us to stand and say the pledges to the flag. She then asked the song leader to lead a song and the game leader to lead a game.
The meeting was then adjourned.
