GREENSPAN AGREEMENTS OFFERED UNDER CAP
Secretary of Agriculture, Orville L. Freeman, has invited local and State government representatives to investigate the program, now being offered by a new "Greenspan" operation of the Cropland Adjustment Program for them to acquire farmland for use as open space and parks. Descriptive material about the CAP is being sent to governors and to county and city governing bodies. Grants are available to cities, counties, and State governments to increase the permanent retirement of cropland to certain noncrop users. The authorized uses are preservation of open space, natural beauty, and development of wild and recreational facilities, and the prevention of air and water pollution. Harvey Wagoner, Chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee—which is in charge of administration of the program in the country—explains that primarily, CAP is intended to encourage farmers and farm owners to take cropland out of production under agreements of 5 to 10 years duration. Farmers who divert the entire allotment or base acreage of one crop may also receive additional cropland on the farm under CAP agreement. The "Greenspan" phase of the program—so named because of its potential for making green space available to urban residents—provides authority for grants to local and State agencies, and for the acquisition of land and for conservation work on that land. Grants to those agencies may not exceed the funds that could have been paid to farmers on the same land through Cropland Adjustment Program. The program may be granted to those agencies that exceed 50 percent of the cost of the land.

BUILD for your own use
Every one of us is a builder. Some of us build bridges, some build houses; others build fortresses or police records, electronic brains or lawn furniture... but each and every one of us is a Community Builder. Because... every penny we spend to satisfy our daily needs helps to build the economy of the trade area in which it is spent... making that community a happier, more prosperous place for its citizens to live, to work, and to shop. Which makes it profitable and wise to do our trading... our Community Building... where we get the benefit of the inevitable results of it... in the economic area where we have our own lives and talents invested... and where our children are being trained for life. There may be nobleness and usefulness about using our money to help build bigger and better cities for the pleasure and profit of other people... but is it practical?

Making More But Enjoying It Less?

Are you making more money than ever before, but still barely scraping along from payday to payday? Well, according to Changing Times, the Kiplinger magazine, you're the victim of a new syndrome known as "prosperity disease" whether it be necessary, or luxuries, or both. Still another counselor believes that much of today's misuse of money is based on marital conflicts and emotional disturbances. Or it comes from impulse buying. Other problems of domestic finance, as seen by the experts, are hidden costs such as repairs and service, failure to take into consideration the cost of credit, financing articles for longer than they will last, and all the little additional expenses connected with major purchases. The old-fashioned way of making a budget was to provide first for the necessities. Then, if there was money over, it would go toward luxuries. However, in today's atmosphere of affluence, the process is reversed. The reason is, most people don't really want to know the unpleasant truth about what they can and cannot afford. If you are caught up in the "spending syndrome" you might find it worthwhile to consult a financial counselor. However, Changing Times believes you can usually treat this disease yourself. The chief medicines are perspective on the family's real financial situation, a list of spending priorities, a cash forecast, a net worth statement kept up-to-date, and realistic, unemotional attitudes toward the dream world that advertising and easy credit have created. In other words, says Changing Times, despite what the advertisements say, happiness does not necessarily an electric hairbrush.
