where his record was 0-3.

Although the late-blooming Fryman's record was far from outstanding, the reports the Pirates' brass received were encouraging.

"We had him in the back of our minds when we started spring training," Pirate manager Harry Walker said.

Fryman pitched creditably in relief roles during the opening month of the season, winning his only decision. His performances enabled him to survive the major-league cutdown Wednesday when the Pirates pared two players from their squad.

"Fryman will be strictly a relief pitcher," Walker had said shortly after the season started. then, Thursday, the manager changed his mind and decided to give the Kentuckian a chance to start.

Shutout Except 6th

With 13,399 fans looking on Friday night at Forbes Field, the youngster made the most of it.

He shut the Dodgers out in all but the sixth inning, when Los Angeles scored all of its runs to tie the score at 3-3. A walk, two singles and an error by third baseman Bob Bailey did the damage.

But the cool-headed Fryman didn't become unstrung and, in the seventh, the Pirates gave him the run he needed when Roberto Clemente tripled and scored on Jim Pagliaroni's sacrifice fly.

There is no intention, in awarding grants, to see that each locality gets back dollar for dollar, it is explained. The awards are made in line with each community's requirements as related to those of other areas.

According to Senator Robert F. Kennedy, in a recent statement, many communities are failing to take full advantage of the Federal aid available to them.

He urged local governments to investigate these opportunities to see if they couldn't qualify for more of it. What is needed, he said, is "initiative and ingenuity."

Frost-Hit Corn May Recover; Replanting Not Necessary

Lexington — Don't disk up your corn field because above-ground portions of new plants show frost damage, says S. H. Phillips, UK Cooperative Extension Service grains specialist.

"The important parts of the corn plant are under the surface of the ground at this time of year," he says, "and these probably were not injured by the recent unexpected freeze. However, a lot of farmers are disking up their corn and replanting. This is probably not necessary."

Phillips said many corn plants showed blackened parts and leaves from the cold, but said this probably will not be a problem. "We think such frost-damaged corn will recover eventually."

He said it is better to let the existing plants recover than to replant. "Replanting costs the farmer money. Also, later plantings have reduced yields. Disking and replanting probably will cost the farmer more than letting frost-damaged corn recover."

There was frost damage throughout the state but last week's extremely low temperatures — a record low for May in many areas — seemed to be most in the eastern part of the state. Much corn was already growing well when the freeze hit.
