Foxhunt starts Monday

The 34th annual field trials and bench show of the Central Kentucky Foxhunters Association is to be held this year Oct. 24-27 with Carlisle as home base, and the Nicholas County Fish and Game Club as headquarters. While many of these will be local guests, visitors will be from the Louisville area to the west, the Cincinnati area to the north, the Big Sandy to the east, the Somerset area to the south, and even from more distant points. Roger Womack, Carlisle attorney, is in charge of arrangements.

For five hours the hounds run the fox, and there are those who swear it is the grandest of all sports. Prizes in Flemington

Will You Help Us By Renewing Early?

During the busy Christmas season just around the corner, nearly 1,000 subscriptions will expire at a time when our meager office staff is virtually swamped with work.

Will you help? If your subscription will expire at any time during the next three months, will you send in your advance renewal now, so that we may handle it before the rush? (You will find the expiration date at the right of the address.)

We thank you in advance for assisting us.

On Monday, Oct. 24, the hounds will be registered and have numbers painted on their collars. That night there will be a bench show (puppies), in which judging is by conformation, alertness, and general deportment.

The first cast will be on Oct. 24. Continued on page 12
