Canned, frozen or juice orange, ready-to-eat cereal, plus milk for teens and instant coffee for grown-ups. All can be ready in the time it takes to boil water for the instant coffee. It Can Be Done

Ten persons died in Kentucky traffic accidents the past Labor Day holiday weekend. Each death was tragic and to be deplored. That the record showed a marked improvement over the previous year, when 16 persons died in such accidents, and it showed a sharp reversal in the upward spiral of traffic deaths, when one recalls there were 21 during the last July 4 holiday period, compared with 12 in the 1965 period, is a fact to be proud of.

On the Memorial Day weekend this year, 16 persons had been killed, 11 from nine in 1965. Had the trends chosen two holiday periods continued, 24 would have been the toll during the Labor Day weekend. Public Safety Commissioner Glenn

You're either too big or too small! Thursday, September 19, 1946. Lyle Licha, state farm was the scene Sunday of unusual activity as over 600 persons gathered there for a second exploratory digging into the soil for bones and tusks of animals which roamed this country 25,000 to 30,000 years ago. Cheered by a pep rally, a grandstand was set up and a pep band scheduled in downtown Carlisle to play for the high school student body. Coach Tedy Ross's Musketeers also inaugurated their 1946 season when they played with the Paris Grays Wednesday, Friday.

Local Business By S. S. TALLENT Chains Help Smaller Businesses Independent merchants in a new suburban community recently joined together to ask large chain department to move into their midst as a competitor. The move was made with the knowledge that local trade activity is self-escalating. Rather than being a threat to existing enterprises, the big stores provided a core for the shopping center. Full-scale newspaper advertising of the department store has a beneficial secondary effect on every shop in the local community. It causes people to stay at home. The store which creates new business in a community is never the sole benefactor of its own advertising and promotion. Women may be one-stop shoppers, but they rarely are one-store shoppers. The woman who travels to a metropolitan center to buy a dress which has been advertised in a regional publication may buy everything from groceries to furniture while on the trip. Every retailer knows that consumers lose time and money by traveling distances to buy. The truth is not self-evident to many consumers. The consumer buys in terms of self-interest. The merchant fails to provide information which will cause consumers to remain at home, which inevitably moves to better publicized centers.
