Acreage-Poundage Proves Best For Flue-Cured Growers

Flue-cured tobacco growers are convinced that acreage-poundage marketing quotas are better than acreage allotments, Freeman M, Hockenamith, Kentucky State ASCS chairman said.

In 1965, more than 96 percent of the growers voting approved the continuation of the program for 3 more marketing years beginning July 1, 1968. In the two years the program has been in effect, carryover of flue-cured tobacco has dropped 11 percent, record high prices have been paid (because of higher quality tobacco) and only about one-third as much tobacco has been taken under loan.

The increasing interest in acreage-poundage quotas is reflected by the tremendous jump in yes votes in several States in the recent referendum, Mr. Hockenamith said. In Georgia, for example, more than 94 percent of the flue-cured growers voted for acreage-poundage. In Florida, 93 percent voted in favor this year, while less than 28 percent supported the program in 1965.

The acreage-poundage system provides for a farm acreage allotment and a farm poundage quota for each farm growing flue-cured tobacco. Under the old program, each farm had an acreage allotment and could market penalty free all the tobacco on the allotment. Acreage-poundage makes it unnecessary for growers to try to produce quality at the expense of quality.

With the increased emphasis on quality, Mr. Hockenamith said demand for U.S. flue-cured tobacco in export and home markets has improved. The 1966-67 exports of flue-cured tobacco, considered on a farm-sales weight basis, are estimated to be the largest on record.

Marketing quota penalties apply to flue-cured tobacco marketed in excess of 100 of the farm poundage quota, and price support is available to growers who comply with their allotments.

CARLISLE KENTUCKY

COUNTRY HAM SHOW

Lexington, Ky.---When early settlers poured into Kentucky over the Wilderness Road in the late 1780's and 1790's, one of the staples they brought for the new life was the hog.

Something about the new land favored development of hog products. It wasn't long before Kentucky became noted for its "country" ham.

It's a good many years now since the early settlers arrived--but one of the features of the Kentucky State Fair (August 17-26 at Louisville) is the fourth annual Kentucky Country Ham show.

The new show rapidly is gaining in popularity. Ultimate aim of this show is to make the famous "old Kentucky ham" a gourmet's delight in the world. Many persons know it today as a fine-flavored aristocrat of the ham family--a lot more people in on the knowledge.

Last year, about 100 fine old hams ---cured and seasoned the exclusive and famous Kentucky ways--were entered. Sponsors of the show are the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, the Kentucky State Fair Board, and the Kentucky Country Ham Processors group.

Dr. W. Kay Harvey, Lexington U.K. Cooperative Extension Service meats specialist, is general chairman of the show. He has full details on the affair.

And gourmets this year again will have an interesting feast. On Wednesday, Aug. 23, at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center's upstairs cafeteria feast wing) the annual "ham breakfast" will be served, at 8:30 a.m.

There the winning hams are annotated and their owner-producers honified. Top winner gets a trophy and $25. There are other trophies and cash premiums through to tenth place.

Dr. Varney said the breakfast---outside the typical traditional and famous Kentucky hams---will feature entertainment by the Randy Atcher show troupe, Barney Arnold, farm editor of WHAS-TV, Louisville, will be auctioneer. Each year at the breakfast the winning ham is auctioned off. Proceeds will be given this year to the Kosair Crippled Children's Home.

The breakfast starts at 8:30 a.m., Louisville time. Dr. Varney has information on tickets.

Harlan Gratton of Bremen won the prize in 1964, first year of the show, for Gratton-Jay Ghent, won the 1965 contest and Perry Froman, Ghent, won the 1966 edition.

Today's Plans Will Foretell Forest Industry Future

Louisville, Kentucky (Special) -- "Most of the trees needed by the year 2000 are already on the ground or will be planted by man and nature within the next few years," a Kentucky lumberman said.

"Reliable projections indicate an increase in demand for all forest products of about 80 percent by the turnof the century, Robert L. Douglass, Centre Brou, Inc, and chairman of the Kentucky Forest Industries Committee, Louisville, added.

Kentucky and the nation's commercial forest lands are fully capable of producing substantially more than the present growth if current levels of forest management could be applied across the board.

"This involves better communications, education and motivation," the industry spokesman added. "Additional acreage of poorly stocked and non-stocked land should be planted to trees."

The multiple use principle of forest management--accommodating a maximum of compatible uses with the highest single potential use of the land must be understood and practiced by the landowners -- farmers, doctors, lawyers, teachers, and other city laymen who own the majority of the state's 10 million acres of commercial timber.

What is planned today may foretell our future. Since overcoming the deficit since 1952 of growth over removal, industry and government foresters are confident that private landowners will join them in getting their growing stock to optimum production.

"Adoption of tree farming principles is the answer," he concluded.

Named To Dean's List

Mrs. Carol Caswell Willis, a University of Kentucky junior, has been named to the dean's list in the UK College of Pharmacy.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Caswell, Route 1, Carlisle, Mrs. Willis was honored by her college dean for attaining a high academic standing. She is a 1962 graduate of Carlisle City High School

Jack Lewyn's Looseleaf Notebook

Free and mandatory grading of tobacco is provided by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture under the Tobacco Inspection Act, passed in 1935. Official inspection is the responsibility of the tobacco division, Consumer and Marketing Service, USDA.

While the official grade on a basket of tobacco does determine its support price, the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association, which administers the support program, has nothing to do with the actual, official grading, which is strictly a USDA responsibility. The Co-op handles the program, but tobacco must have an official government grade before it can be eligible for support at all.

This is the second time since 1960 that the possibility of a fee for USDA grading has been considered. Grading is a vital factor in orderly marketing and purchase of tobacco sales.

Tobacco warehousemen from throughout the flue-cured burley belt will meet in Knoxville, Tenn., June 15-16 for the 21st annual convention of the Burley Auction Warehouse Association. Discussion of the problems faced by the burley industry, and by the tobacco business generally, will highlight the business sessions. Reynolds Bell, a Lexington, warehouseman, is president of the BAWA.

Second Highest TB Case Rate

Kentucky, with 1,14-new active cases of tuberculosis reported last year, had the second highest rate in the nation, a preliminary figures just released by the National Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta.

Kentucky's rate of 42.2 cases per 100,000 population is nearly double the national average of 24.4 for the continental U. S., but topped only by Nevada with 50.4 case rate. In 1965 Kentucky was fourth in case rate.

Dr. Richard L. Mardis, president of the Kentucky Tb and Respiratory Disease Association, says he views the case rise with misgivings. "While we have yet to attain the high 110 case rate," he said, "we are pleased that more of those who have TB are being found and treated."

Mardis added that one of the best ways to track down undetected cases of TB is to have every school child submit to chest x-rays then to check the "positive" reactors and their adult contacts for active tuberculosis.

Non-resident Fishing Licence Is Proposed

Prestonsburg, Ky., July 31 --- "A-day-for-a-dollar" non-resident fishing license for Kentucky visitors has been proposed by the League of Kentucky Sportsmen, Board of Directors. The new daily, low cost permit is intended to stimulate and encourage millions of out-of-state tourists who have contributed so greatly to Kentucky's economy largest industry.

The proposal of the 10-member Board of the 41,000-member sportsmen-conservation organization will be on the agenda of the Fish and Wildlife Resource Commission meeting in Frankfort on August 25.

It was voted here at Jennie Wiley State Park during a weekend meeting of the League Board, attended by Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Minor Clark.

The new $1.00 license would be the most economical short-time fishing recreation buy for the visiting tourists in the Commonwealth.

It would augment the $3.25, 15-day non-resident fishing license and the $7.50 annual non-resident fishing permit.

The Board voted to urge the Kentucky delegation in Congress to support federal measures for extended watershed wetlands and flood prevention.

Specifically, HB 480 on wetlands, and Nebraska Senator Roman Hruska's two bills (SI 853 and SI 854) were noted for approval.

The Board of Kentucky's largest lay arm of wildlife conservation opposes HB 482 which would increase the $3 federal duck stamp to $5 and would make it required for dove shooting.

Willy Riehemann, Fort Mitchell, president of the League, said that League Secretary-treasurer Redmon Payne is to contact the Kentucky members of Congress concerning the Board's action.

County Price Supports Announced By U.S.D.A.

County price support rates for 1967-crop soybeans were announced today by USDA. Rates for counties reflect national average support price of $2.50 per bushel for 1967-crop soybeans, this is the same as for 1966 crops.

County rates are for No. 2 grade soybeans with adjustments for moisture, foreign material, damage, and other factors. Rates are based on historical market price relationships throughout soybean producing areas.

Some factors influencing market price relationships are accessibility to crushing and export facilities, cost of transportation to market outlets and existence of adequate storage which permits more orderly marketing.

Individual county rates have been established for first time in 14 additional counties in Virginia in line with Department's policy of establishing county rates in areas where soybean production has reached significant proportions and where there is considerable variation in market factors. Otherwise, county rates are identical with those for 1966 crops. Should farmers in areas for which historical data not available receive price support, rates will be determined and announced.

Loans and purchases agreements are for five crop. Loans available through Nov. 30, 1969, and will mature on July 31, 1970.
