Squirrel Season Opened Aug. 12

Kentucky nimrods initated the 1967 hunting season Saturday, August 12, when the 112-day squirrel season opened in all 120 counties, Minor Clark, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources said.

The hunters of the bushytailed animals, one of the most sought after species, will again this year have a split season. The season will continue throughout the months of August, September and October without interruption. Then a second season, December 1 through December 31, will be available for those who like to hunt the squirrel when the tree leaves have disappeared.

Biologists of the Department have reported a bumper crop of squirrels again this year, following the unusually good hunting that was offered last season. Many hunters found the squirrel more plentiful in the 1966 season than for a number of years and with a good mast crop (nuts, berries, etc.) this season an unusually good crop of young squirrels was produced.

The bag limit again this year is six with a possession limit of 12 after two or more days of hunting. Squirrels may be hunted in daylight hours throughout the prescribed season. All breach-loading rifles of loaded with slugs or buckshot are prohibited for squirrel hunting.
