THE FAMILY LAWYER

Funny Money

What if you discover that a dollar bill, recently acquired by you, is a counterfeit? Your quick reaction might be:

"This thing is a hot potato. I'd better unload it onto somebody else as fast as I can."

But if you do, you will be committing the serious crime of passing counterfeit money. True, you do have a hot potato on your hands. But it is folly to add to the minor mistake of accepting the money the mistake of passing it along.

Your duty is plain. Notify the local police department or the United States Secret Service at once, giving as much information as you can about when, where, and from whom you received the bill. No, you will not be reimbursed for the one dollar. But you will be helping to lift one of the most ancient and persistent of crimes, one that has been given a new lease on life by modern techniques of printing and engraving.

In the case of criminals, the counterfeiter is something of a maverick. He is seldom motivated by sudden passion or by grinding poverty or by personal maladjustments. He has time enough for planning, money enough for equipment, and talent enough for manufacturing. He is a cool customer who knows exactly what he is doing.

However, merely passing—or the manufacturing—counterfeit money may occur in perfect innocence. It is part of the government's job in prosecuting to prove that the person who passed the counterfeit money knew (or at least thought) that it was counterfeit. Consider this case:

An intoxicated fellow, caught spending counterfeit money in a bar, denied that he knew it was bogus. At the trial, the government told the court:

"Shortly before this man's arrest, he burned a $5 bill to light his cigar. So he must have known the money was no good."

But the court was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and dismissed the charge. The judge said it was quite possible for a drinking man to burn real money —just to show off.

In another case, though, there was evidence that the defendant, when he realized detectives were on his trail, flushed his counterfeit money down a toilet.

This time, the defendant was convicted. The court found no reasonable explanation for this behavior except a guilty conscience.
