"The voice of one who goes before to make...
The path of June more beautiful, is this...
Sweet May"

Sweet pathmaker indeed, this May,
I never do I remember to have seen a more beautiful June...

Slowly we drive through the mist,
the flowers, green in pasture, and in tree and hedge...

These flowers of June,
I know I realize that I am at the center of it...

Small's Greenhouse

of Kentucky has come to me, this sized horse in its lush meadows and quiet woodlands...

So home mightly peaceful, as twilight comes,
I sit alone to the glory of Summer's first month...

And yet, reading June, and faint to sleep,
but cannot, I fall to painting mental pictures...

So full of sweet enchantment are these flowers of June...

These flowers of June,
I lay and slowly stow in my own crates and count the beads...

By faintly retraced to the C. O. embarking for my first train ride in eight years...

But now the beat begins to tell and the wail of electric fans...
