The Opportunity is Yours

Kentuckians have the opportunity--through good driving, including obeying the laws, courtesy and restraint--to make the coming Memorial Day holiday weekend a memorable occasion.

Let's do all we can to assure that Memorial Day--when we pause to pay tribute to our military dead--is a memorable day traffic-wise.

Motorists can achieve the goal--keeping down traffic deaths--by driving when well-rested, driving defensively (looking out for the other fellow), and by having respect for others.

But, unless all try, it can so easily be a day or weekend or highway horror. Last year, 16 persons lost their lives in Kentucky traffic accidents during the Memorial Day weekend, seven more than in 1965.

And this year it well might be more difficult to hold down the toll. For one thing there is an ever-increasing volume of traffic. Then in 1966, the holiday period on which the death count was based, extended from 6 p.m. Friday, May 27, through midnight Monday, May 30--a total of 78 hours. This year, the count begins at 6 p.m. Friday, May 26, and extends through midnight Tuesday, May 30, an extra full day, or a total of 102 hours.

Traffic experts say many factors--ranging from the driver to the car and the condition of the road, among others--are involved in highway accidents. But most recognize that the driver is the most important element--that most depends upon him.

During the 1966 Fourth of July weekend, 21 persons were killed in Kentucky highway accidents, up from 12 the year before. But last Labor Day weekend, the toll was held to 10, down by six from the comparable 1966 weekend.

So the grim statistics show it can happen--either way. It is up to us to see that lives are saved, and that we do have a memorable period.

MERCURY VAPOURS

by Warren R. Fisher

We are reprinting two notations sent out under the heading of the IGA food score:

"Why is it? --A man wakes up in the morning after sleeping under an advertised blanket on an advertised mattress and pulls off advertised pajamas, takes a bath in an advertised tub, shaves with an advertised razor, washes with an advertised soap, puts on advertised clothes, sits down to breakfast of advertised coffee and cereal, puts on an advertised hat, rides to his office in an advertised car, writes with an advertised pencil, --then, he refuses to ADVERTISE. Says advertising doesn't pay. Then, if a business isn't good enough to advertise, he advertises it for sale." Follow your own counsel;

Don't pay too much attention to gloomy predictions. I know a man with a small business who has been expecting the worst for thirty years. The result has been that practically every business in town has doubled or tripled, or quadrupled in size during that time while his has remained the same size. He's still expecting the worst and he's getting it, and he will continue to get it until he realizes there is more profit in expecting good than there is in expecting bad. There was never a time when there was more opportunity than today. How's your outlook?--An Earl Nightingale Vignette.

George Trotter writing in the Lebanon Enterprise tells of a Washington County man: The late Luther Hardin of Springfield no doubt was proud of his 1,144-pound burley crop he sold in 1938, but, compared to today's valuable market prices, his earnings were very small. An old sale bill from the leaf house indicates he received a total of only $81.20 for his burley. The six grades sold for as low as three cents a pound and 12 cents was the highest. Farmers nowadays are well off and should know it!

Letters to the Editor

May 22, 1967
Editor, Carlisle Mercury

Dear Sir:

The purpose of the letter is to inform the people of Nicholas County of the objectives and desired results of the Teen Inn.

Before the Teen Inn, the teenagers had nowhere to go, of course, there was the picture show, but the teens got tired of going to the same place all the time. There was no place to turn. The adults started griping about the high rate of juvenile delinquency in Nicholas County. Finally the adults stepped in and formed the Teen Inn.

The Teen Inn provides an atmosphere in which the young people of Nicholas County can develop a pride and wholesome moral and physical growth knowing that the parents and people of Nicholas County care enough to provide a place for recreation.

Varieties of strawberries that freeze well are: Blakemore, Premier, Tennessee Beauty, Tennessee Shipper, Surecrop and Pocahontas.

Selection and preparation - Select firm ripe berries free from white or hollow centers or green tip. Wash in ice or cold water and remove stems. Slice or crush large berries unless you are going to freeze some packages for salad or garnish.

If you are freezing berries with syrup -fill containers with berries and cover with a cold syrup made by dissolving 3/4 cup sugar to four cups water. Leave 1/2 inch head space for pints, 1 inch for quart containers. Seal and freeze.

If you are freezing berries with sugar-Place whole or sliced berries in a bowl, add 3/4 cup sugar per quart of berries and mix thoroughly. Fill containers leaving 1/2 inch head space for pint and 1 inch for quarts. Seal and freeze.

If you are freezing berries without sugar-Pack well ripened, deep red berries into a container. Leave 1/2 inch head space for pints and one inch for quarts. Seal and freeze.

Ascorbic acid can be added to either of the above methods if you desire. The ascorbic acid helps to preserve color and flavor of fresh berries. It can be purchased at drug stores or grocers. There are different brand names so read label-an example is Fruit Freeze.

I guess everyone has their favorite strawberry preserve recipe. If you will add a little butter (about 1 t. per quart) to your recipe it will cut down on the "skimming".

Here's a basic recipe for uncooked jam from the U. S. Department of Agriculture food specialists: 3 cups crushed berries (takes about 1 1/2 quarts berries) , 5 cups sugar, 1 package powdered pectin, 1 cup cold water. Sort and wash fully ripe fruit. Drain. Remove caps and stems from berries, crush berries. Measure 3 cups of prepared fruit into a large mixing bowl. Add sugar, mix well and let stand for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Dissolve the pectin in the cold water, bring to a boil, and boil for 1 minute. Add pectin solution to the fruit-add-sugar mixture and stir for 2 minutes. Pour the jam into freezer containers or canning jar, leaving 1/2 inch space at the top. Cover the containers and let stand for 24 hours or until the jam has set. Makes about 7 half-pint jars or freezer containers.

Glazed Strawberry Pie

One baked nine-inch pastry shell, One quart fresh strawberries

Glaze: three-fourths cup sugar, two tablespoons tapioca flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup water.

Prepare and bake pastry shell. Cool. Wash berries under cold running water; remove caps and any damaged spots. Leave whole. To prepare glaze: Measure sugar, tapioca flour and salt into a small saucepan. Mix thoroughly with a spoon so that no lumps of tapioca flour can be seen. Add the water. Cook, stirring constantly, on medium heat until mixture begins to thicken-you can feel this as you stir. When bubbles begin to break through the surface (boil) remove it from the heat immediately. It will still look milky; but let it set two or three minutes (off the heat) and it will finish cooking itself. If you try to finish cooking it on the heat, it will be a rubbery mass after it cools.

Stir in a few drops of red food coloring if desired. When strawberries are plentiful, you can simmer a cup or so of the less fancy berries (crushed) with a cup of water for a few minutes then strain it, and use in place of water as the liquid for improved color and flavor.

Arrange a layer of strawberries in pie shell and spoon a part of the hot glaze over them, then add the rest of the strawberries and spoon the rest of the hot glaze over them. Place in the refrigerator until serving time. Top with lightly sweetened whipped cream when ready to serve.

Note: Do not try to sweeten strawberries before adding the glaze-it provides sweetening enough, and the addition of sugar to the berries will only draw juice and make them soupy.

AGREE or NOT
I Say What I Think

By S. C. VAN CURON

FRANKFORT, Ky. -- Sure to be amended by the 1968 General Assembly is the Corrupt Practices (or fair campaign practices) Act passed by the 1966 Assembly.

It's not perfect by any means. Candidates aren't living up to the letter of the act, and minor officers are complaining bitterly about the profusion of reports they have to make. The 100 members of the House elected this November are going to have a lot to say about the amount of work they have had to do in living up to the act--if they have.

Chapter 123 of Kentucky Revised Statutes (Corrupt Practices Act) calls for four financial reports from every candidate covered by the act to be made by his treasurer--1, Seven days after the treasurer is appointed; 2. On the fourth Monday preceding a primary or general election; 3. The final report during the campaign, containing all contributions received since the last report, shall be made as the seventh day preceding the primary or general election and shall be filed not later than the fifth day preceding said election; 4. The final report shall be filed 15 days after the election.

The law also says that no contributions of money or other thing of value, nor obligation therefor, shall be made, and no expenditure of money or other thing of value, nor obligation therefor, shall be made or incurred in excess of $100, directly or indirectly, anonymously, in a fictitious name, or by a person or a group in the name of another, to support or defeat a candidate in an election.

All advertisements, billboards, handbills, paid-for television and radio announcements and other communications intended to support or defeat a candidate shall be signed or identified by words "paid for by" followed by the name and address of the committee and the treasurer on whose behalf the communication appears.

This chapter provides a whole host of penalties that convers about anyone or any corporation or business that violates provisions of the act.

In making the financial reports, names of persons, companies or groups contributing $500 or more must be listed by name and address.

The one supposed loophole of this already found in this campaign is the purchase of dinner tickets. It is depended on the ground that anyone can purchase as many tickets as he likes just so the ticket itself is less than $500 in price.

But the act says, relating to the making of financial reports -- Proceeds from the sale of tickets for events such as dinners, luncheons, rallies and similar fund raising events, mass collections made at such events, and sales of items such as campaign pins, buttons, hats, ties, literature and similar materials, shall be total proceeds from each category shall be listed.

Now as to the violations in this election, and there are bound to be some since the law is new, ads have appeared in newspapers in Kentucky for candidates without the name of the organization and the name of the treasurer and address who paid for the ad.

None of the billboards of candidates that I have seen has met the letter of the law. They do not contain the name of an organization or the name of the treasurer.

The next question to come is what happens if John Q. Public files a suit in court after the election charging that provisions of this act were violated by a treasurer or deputy campaign treasurer with the candidate's knowledge.

Here's what the act provides--If any provisions of KRS 123.005, 123.051 to 123.101 and 123.991 are violated, the nomination or election of such candidate shall be void and shall be filled as provided by law.

Local Business

By R. B. TALBERT
Chairman, Dept. of Journalism

Two venerable newspapers in New York recently merged. The event was a shock to people who regret to see any great institution pass from the American scene.

Yet, the suspension of great metropolitan newspapers is evidence that people prefer to trade in local communities.

It is also proof that retail advertising in community newspapers is more economical and more effective than advertising in giant regional publications.

The demise of metropolitan newspapers do not leave a vacuum. They do not quit publication because subscriptions decline. The great newspapers withdraw from the field because retailers in suburban communities are placing increasing amounts of advertising in weekly and small daily newspapers.

In recent years, thousands of new suburban newspapers have been started in every large city. They are the "hometown" newspapers for the suburban residents. They are the papers which carry news about neighborhood people, local schools, and unique local problems which a metropolitan newspaper could not handle.

To such community newspapers, the suburban people look for the latest shopping news and when the community newspapers contain complete shopping information, consumers do their shopping in the local shopping center.

The suspension of an occasional metropolitan newspaper is not an indication that the newspaper is losing its appeal. It is simply an indication that retail advertising is more effective and less expensive in hometown newspapers--whether in a suburban community or the small county seat.

To keep cool this summer you can ...

have a cool drink every five minutes

take a cold shower

swim for an afternoon

spend an hour on ice

or install central electric air-conditioning for

COOLNESS THAT KEEPS!

There are lots of ways you can keep cool this summer, temporarily. But for lasting comfort you need central electric air-conditioning. Central air-conditioning gives you "whole house comfort" as it filters, dehumidifies and circulates the cool, dry air throughout your home. So you live, really live, in the entire house ... not just one room.

If you want coolness that keeps all summer long . . . see your dealer now about central electric air-conditioning . . . the way of today!

No Rest

Lexington -- There'll be no rest for Kentucky farmers from the alfalfa weevil this year.

That's the opinion of Dr. Rudy Scheiber U. K. Cooperative Extension Service entomologist, who says:

1) Egg population from the over-wintering weevils is up;

2) Weather may be a critical factor. In case of a wet spring, the weevil may get a good start if spray equipment can't get into the fields.

For these two reasons, the weevil could be "potentially" as destructive this year as last year--when it was a ringtailed destroyer.

Get ready to fight the pest he says, by readying equipment, purchasing proper insecticides and inspecting fields carefully at regular intervals.

"If spray equipment can be taken into fields, apply the first spray when five out of 10 shoots are infested."

Fleming of alfalfa fields, on the increase in Kentucky, is a good control measure. However, trol measure. However, it should not be done after early March. Alfalfa must be dormant, snowoff the fields and ground firm enough to support equipment.

Don't flame new seedlings the first year, he warns, nor older fields that are not in the dormant stage.
