Dick Footed and the Shark, by Natalie Babbitt. Young Dick Footed, who cares not for the sea, finally decides to go fishing with his father, old John Footed. It is bad enough that the "boat leapt and plunged while the sea sank and lapped," but then Dick and his father are attacked by a shark. Mr. readers will be as surprised as the shark, to find out how Dick Footed came to the rescue.

High Country by Libra Zan Cleveland. The wild, spectacular, rugged beauty of the High Country gave an impression of unchanging permanence. This land was born beneath the sea. It is a land where mountains were born in time and erosion. And for any traveler, here is a true help to ward understanding the true enchantment of the High Country.

The Story of Your Bones, by Edith Lurie. How many bones do you have? What are bones made of? How do they grow? How do bones help you bear? These and many other questions are answered in this exciting and authoritative book.

Chains, by Natalie Carlson. The author and the illustrator tell a warm and satisfying story of a dog who found that a strong sense of loyalty can allow devotion to more than one master.
