Commemoration of 35 Years Of National Farm Legislation

The Nicholas County ASC Committee and Office Personnel will participate in commemoration of the 35th anniversary of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, on Friday, July 12, when farm leaders, reporters and office personnel during the period 1933-67 will be recognized.

In 1933, the Agricultural Adjustment Act was formed to relieve the economic distress plaguing the Nation's farmers. The act has survived droughts, floods, wars and political changes in government. It was the birth of the farmer committee system, placing the responsibility of decisions upon the local producers. This system has proven to be effective, democratic and a builder of farm leadership and this basic law has continued to serve with some modification until today.

The future of farm programs and agriculture is uncertain. With new production techniques, new use farmers can produce enough food to feed all people. Production seems unlimited, without controls of some kind, stability in the farming industry is hard to imagine. The future of farm families seems dependent on the leadership developed during 35 years under the present farm program.

Speaking to a local civic club, Miss Peden said: "In order to help combat the urban crisis, we must attack the basic problem at its root. There must be innovative new thinking with bold but realistic programs to trigger growth in small towns and rural areas. The federal government must act to support this movement through tax incentives, job training incentives, and other assistance to states and localities."

Miss Peden served as Kentucky Commerce Commissioner during Kentucky's greatest period of industrial growth. She also endorsed the further study of the "new-town" concept as a possibility for the future development of certain areas.
