Pressure Mounts

Vets Win Tenth Straight; Hunter Notches 5th Victory

Billy Hunter's two hit pitching and ten Dodger errors allowed the V.F.W. Vets of the Babe Ruth League their tenth victory without a defeat, Bill McNabb's Dodgers had the Vets on the ropes for two and two-thirds innings. In the first inning Dodger hurler Larry Watkins singled, stole second, came to third on an error and scored the first run of the game on a passed ball. This was another record broken as being the first time the Vets had ever been behind in 1968. For awhile the Vets were in trouble and couldn't get the ball rolling. With two out in the third Ernie Compton singled to light the five run spark that burst out the Dodgers 1-0 lead. Eight more Vet runs crossed the plate in the fifth and sixth innings and three more in the seventh for a total of 16 runs. Yet pitcher Billy Hunter obtained fifth win allowing one run and two hits. He walked four and struck out nine.

The Vets grabbed their ninth win Thursday as they defeated the Senators 15-4. Steve Kimberling got the win by striking out 13 and walking only three.

Where the Dodgers left off with errors last week the Giants took up Tuesday. 12 Giant errors and 13 free passes lifted the Braves over Larry Allison's lead-footed team 14-1. Jimmy Parker pitched excellent ball giving up one run and five hits.

The Dodgers took it on the nose again, this time from the Braves, the score of 18-3. Dennis Berry officially faced only 20 men and gave up only three runs and two hits.

Baseball weather has finally arrived. Have you seen your favorite team in action? If not, do it soon.

Science To Help Solve Social Ills, Says Dr. S. Ramo

Science and technology can be used to advance the lagging social side of our civilization, Dr. Simon Ramo, vice chairman of the board of directors, TRW Inc., said at the American Iron and Steel Institute meeting in New York.

He said that "the coming of new man-machine partnerships on the intellectual-informational front should be the greatest boon that science could give to society." He also referred to the electronic devices which team up "synthetic intelligence" with man's brains and senses as the technological advance most feared and most misunderstood as to its effects.

Describing the principal fear as that of man becoming an anonymous cog in a vast interconnection of machines all controlled by computers, Dr. Ramo told how, instead, the human brain could rise to higher plateaus of cultural and social attainments while the "machine partner" takes on high-capacity handling of information.

Dr. Ramo told the meeting, "Advancing technology in this instance, as indeed in every other, offers us choices. It does not determine the direction in which our society must go. If we grasp this point ahead of time we can set out to see that the new technology is employed in such a manner as to give us a society closer to that which we should like to have. Unthinking acceptance of the myth of robotism may keep us from having a choice. It leads to a default, a failure to create social arrangements that match technological change and thus make possible society's changeover to a clearly articulated goal."

Dr. Ramo said that the application of technology to the needs of society is relatively healthy and productive in two aspects of daily life: the free-enterprise sector of our economy and the area of national security. He added that "technology has hardly been brought to bear" on such "social-engineering" problems as control and utilization of national resources, rapid transit in our cities, air and water pollution control, urban development and redevelopment, the improvement of our educational and medical resources and many other problems.

He recommended as a powerful methodology the "Systems Approach," the essential ingredient in the successful application of science to military and space systems and to some industrial operations. "It is now beginning to be apparent that the systems approach, if broadened, is also well suited to attack the civil systems type of problem in our society" he said.

Implied Consent Effective Today

Gov. Louie B. Nunn has directed Public Safety Commissioner, Col. William Newman, to implement Kentucky's "implied consent" law without delay.

"The so-called 'drunk drivers' law will go into effect June 13th to the extent personnel and breath testing equipment are available," the governor said.

It is expected the metropolitan areas of Jefferson and Fayette counties will be the only areas of the state to feel the full force of the law until funds are received for additional equipment.

Estimated total cost of additional equipment and training personnel to fully implement Kentucky's "Alcohol and Safe Highway" project is $420,360, half of which is being sought from the Federal government, on a matching fund basis.

Funds applied for will cover the project from June 1968 to May 1969. The proposal provides for a training program and instructors in a joint operation at the Traffic Institute at Eastern Kentucky University.

Under the new law, anyone operating a motor vehicle in Kentucky will be deemed to have given his consent to a test to determine the amount of alcohol in his system if he is arrested and charged with drunk driving.

Should a motorist refuse to permit a chemical analysis of his blood, breath, urine, or saliva, he would be subject to lose his drivers license for a maximum of six months.

producing wheat, and who as an operator expects to receive more that 50 percent of his current year's income from the total production on the farm (not including the anticipated income from wheat produced on a "new farm" allotment).

Other factors are also involved, and it is suggested that interested producers discuss the details with officials at the ASCS county office.

The Chairman said that formal application for a "new farm" wheat allotment may be made by filing a written application at the ASCS county office prior to the July 1 deadline.

terial cultures, time and temperature used in the cooking of the curd, methods of salting, aging, etc."

Cheese is available in many different forms. Baby Gouda comes in a round, flat 10-ounce disk. Cheddar usually is a five-pound rectangular "print" --and the Swiss make a "wheel" of cheese from 160 to 230 pounds.

Cheese is rich in protein, milk fat and minerals. The ratio of these varies among cheeses, but Cheddar contains about 25 percent protein, 32 percent fat and two percent minerals. Swiss has 28 percent each of protein and fat and 2.3 percent minerals; while cottage cheese (creamed) has 14 percent protein, four percent fat and one half percent minerals.

"Per capita annual consumption of cheese in the U.S. has increased the last 20 years from about 5.5 pounds to 14 pounds. Italy and France consume more than 20 pounds per capita a year, with Denmark, the Netherlands, Norway and Switzerland not far behind, but still appreciably ahead of the U.S."
