Double Amputee, Ewing Mays Visits And Cheers Handicapped

Denver, Colorado--

An double amputee Ewing W. Mays departed from Fitzsimons General Hospital here after a five day visit, he was told by Major General Robert E. Blount, commanding officer, "You are welcome and invited to return again and again to provide your brand of therapy for our patients."

General Blount was referring to Mays' national tour of military and civilian hospitals, visiting the newly handicapped, and particularly the amputees.

His Denver visit was fresh on the heels of an overwhelming tour of hospitals in the Los Angeles area that received much national acclaim.

Mays, who lost both of his legs in World War II, plans several nation-wide tours this year. In most cases the military places our wounded servicemen in hospitals close to their home towns, but Mays aim is to visit all of these hospitals in 1968. The current winter tour is taking him to hospitals in Nashville, Little Rock, Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, Los Angeles, Phoenix, Denver, El Paso, Del Rio, San Antonio and Houston, Texas; New Orleans, and Memphis.

A tour of Vietnam is also on Mays 1968 agenda, Mays says, "Someone who has conquered his handicap needs to be there to walk before them, talk to them, and show them that it's not so bad after all."

Ewing W. Mays

At Fitzsimons General Hospital in Denver, Colorado, patient Gerald S. Schneider of Saverton, Missouri is carried by double leg amputee Mays. Mays says this helps the boys realize how little a handicap their tragedy need be.

His work is described as "inspirational by-example." And what an example! After his tragedy he not only became a successful businessman, but he adopted a permanent avocation of service to the handicapped.

In the years since he has comforted thousands of wounded veterans in our hospitals at home and abroad. In 1951 the Defense Department sent him to Japan and Korea where he spoke to more than 80,000 wounded service-men, both American and South Korean.

Besides his hospital visitation Mays corresponds with many people who have lost limbs in civilian life. When requested he makes every effort to include a visit to these persons on his agenda.

There is always an air of excitement when this Fort Lauderdale, Fla. businessman visits a hospital, One would have to have a trained eye to even know he is a double amputee, Tom. O. Mathews, a physician at Brooke Army Medical Center in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, describes Mays visit thusly: "Talking, laughing, dancing at times, cajoling and using methods of friendliness that made it impossible to resist, Mays became, I feel, an actual part of the ward. It was one of those moments which all people are not privileged to witness."

The Biggest Show in Basketball

By a large hour Saturday night the 1968 tournament field will be completed. The winners of the 16 regions across the commonwealth will remain to gun it out the following week in Louisville in what has been labeled "the biggest show in basketball."

The "sweet sixteen" and their legions of followers will converge on Freedom Hall for this basketball extravaganza. For the fans, it is a four-day holiday. For the competing teams it is four days of living under intense psychological pressures and physical exhaustion. Players and fans alike weep as their colors fall in defeat. But as a new day dawns they adopt new teams still in the running in the 15-game marathon. As on it goes, until it all shakes down to a final tumultous hour on Saturday night, when the two surviving quintets take the floor before upwards of 18,000 shouting fans. This is the biggest hour in Kentucky high school athelitics--the battle for the State High School Tournament Championship.

An entire state is swept up in basketball fever for these four days in March. Veteran tournament-goers reminisce about the other years. The best team? The best player? There is always a spirited difference of opinion. Each tournament has a favorite and sentimental choice. They are seldom the same team. The favorite is chosen on the unemotional qualifications of won-lost records and shooting charts. The team that displayes the most color and flare catches the fancy of the fans and is the big sentimental favorite. It all goes to make the Kentucky High School State Tournament the "biggest show in basketball."

Water Purification Method Sought By U.K. Researcher

To provide American fighting men with an individual, safe water purification unit is the goal of University of Kentucky researcher, Dr. Robert B. Grieves, chairman of the Department of Chemical Engineering.

The project, "Foam Seperation for Field Water Treatment," is financed by the Office of the Surgeon General, U.S. Army Medical Research and Development Command. The current grant of $31,273 will extend the four-year project, which was begun in 1964.

Dr. Grieves said the foam seperation principal, previously used only in the laboratory, consists in adding detergents to any low quality water. Air is bubbled through it, generating a foam. During the bubbling period, he said, impurities are concentrated in the foam which can be removed leaving the water safe for drinking.

"Soldiers in Vietnam often are surrounded by undrinkable water from streams or rice paddies. Through adaptation of the foam separation method we expect to achieve an easy-carried quick water purifier that will permit each soldier to eliminate the dangerous impurities of low quality water" Dr. Grieves said.

Assisting in the project are post-doctorate Dibakar Bhattacharyya, Calcutta, India and Ronald L. Harness, Bellefonte; Dana P. Ladd, Frankfort, and Richard W. Lee, Owensboro, undergraduate chemical engineering juniors.

Dr. Grieves said that Kentucky rivers and streams provide the samples necessary for testing each stage of the development process.

A companion chemical engineering research project deals with the direct treatment of certain industrial wastes.

Wasp Nests Appear Sprays Cut Problem

Warm weather and budding flowers are a welcome mark of spring. But they also mark the appearance of wasps, stinging insects which always leave their mark.

Here's how they operate, says Dr. Rudy Schellner, U.K. Cooperative Extension Service entomologist, and ways to control them:

A female wasp that survived the winter will pick a site and construct a nest in the spring. When the first brood emerges, the females enlarge the nest and start producing more wasps. By early summer, you have a big problem.

Use a three-percent Chlordane spray on surface of eaves and window sills. One-half cup of 45 percent Chlordane emulsifiable concentrate will make one gallon of three percent spray. This material will cover 500 to 1,000 square feet of painted surface. DDT or dieldrin mixed according to label instructions are also effective.

Start in early March, Dr. Schellner says, and repeat the spray application every 30 days until nest-building activities stops.

Check area extension offices in your county for help.

Sweet Tater Time In Benton, Ky.

The sweet potato started something big in Benton, Kentucky--something that's now a 125-year-old tradition called Tater Day. It began in 1843, when this fun-and-trading event marked the opening session of county court on the first Monday in April.

Everybody went to town that day to visit with neighbors and do a little swappin'. The seed sweet potato was a main item of trade, for it was scarce and valued in those parts. As the potato-trading continued through the years, the occasion came to be known as Tater Day.

Bentonians don't forget the plant that started it all. In the town's Court Square this April 1, the main feature will still be seen sweet potatoes sold off the back of a truck.

School's dismissed in city and county for the festivities which include a pulling contest pitting horse against horse, swapping mules and all sorts of other items kidding and tale-spinning and aldewalk selling. Citizens in old-time costumes and specially sprouted beards will mingle with folks from all over the U.S. who visit the small community for the day.

A Tater Day Queen will reign over all events, especially the big parade that starts at 10:00 a.m. She will be selected March 31 at 7:30 p.m. in the Benton Elementary School.

Tater Day coincides with April Fool's Day this year, so city slickers had better beware. They say that in olden days the inexperienced or unwary soul who didn't know the ins and outs of "trick trading" might go home with a non-hunting dog, a balky mule or even a passel of sweet potatoes gone sour.

That's Tater Day in Benton, Ky.--a festive and friendly old custom that has survived virtually unchanged to the present day.

Object Lesson In Liming Cited By U.K. Specialist

Here's an object lesson in the need for liming a strongly acid field to be used in corn production:

Harold Miller, U.K. Cooperative Extension Service specialist, and Harold Vaught, Adair County, area extension agent in agronomy, cite this demonstration:

In 1966, a corn field was well fertilized with nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium. But corn yields were low. Analysis of the soil showed it was strongly acid.

For 1967, to illustrate the value of liming, three tons of a good grade limestone was applied to one area of the field. Another area got 1,000 pounds of hydrated lime in addition to three tons of limestone. A third area received no limestone at all. Over the whole field, 180 pounds each of nitrogen, phosphate and potash were disked in. When the corn was drilled in, an additional 20 pounds of each nutrient was applied at the row.

The no-limestone area averaged 52.2 bushels of corn. The area with the three tons of limestone averaged 105 bushels. The area with limestone and hydrated lime averaged 121.9 bushels.

We believe the necessity for liming strongly acid corn land is well illustrated, Miller said. "The additional response--from the hydrated lime was probably due to application of treatments shortly before planting. The more slowly soluble ground limestone had not had time to correct soil acidity sufficiently to prevent toxicity early in the growing season.

Enough said?"

SPECIAL TO CATTLEMEN

We are putting together a carload order of Purina Check-Fly Cattle Blocks for shipment the first part of April. This product KILLS horn fly, house fly, stable fly, and FACE FLY maggots before they start to fly. It also aids in control of stomach worms, hook worms, and nodular worms PLUS helps prevent foot rot and lumpy jaw. This is a 15% protein block that is high in energy, trace minerals, and vitamins. It also contains salt, medication, molasses, and grain. No other source of salt is needed. Self feed as the sole source of salt to cattle on native or temporary pasture. Time to start is when grass is approximately 100 days. THE PRICE? Thats the best part---less than $3.00 a block in large quantities. CALL US NOW FOR YOUR SUMMER NEEDS ----FOR BEST RESULTS START FEEDING THE FIRST SIGN OF FLIES.

ATTENTION DAIRYMEN----STRETCH YOUR HAY

That's right--stretch your hay. Sound silly? It's not. You can actually reduce the amount of hay you are currently feeding and increase your milk production by adding a half gallon of Purina Golden Bulky on top of your present milking ration at each feeding. Golden Bulky is light and bulky---a 100 lbs. fills six bushel baskets. It's high in Vitamins A and D. Cows love it because it is high in molasses. Give it a try and see how Purina Golden Bulky can stretch your hay till grass.
