Wide Of The Mark

It is an accepted fact that untold millions of dollars of U. S. aid to foreign nations has been misused. Thomas Scallan, publisher of the magazine "The Sunbelt Record," following a three-month tour around the world by ship, train and plane, observes, "The time has come for all Americans to demand that America Aid go directly to the people of the underdeveloped nations without any strings or favoritism to foreign governments. It is

A Fitting Epitaph

In August, 1968, the general price level was 4.3 per cent higher than in August, 1967. The rise in the price level has meant that wages and salaries have not kept pace with the price level. This has meant that many citizens unable to increase their income are feeling to a sharper degree the pinch of inflation.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts that for 1968 as a whole inflation will take prices up by 4 per cent or more. This is part of the price of

Over Reaction

The general aura of tolerance for the lawbreaker and of permissiveness toward intolerable public behavior has been an important factor precipitating what is now called a "crisis of law respect." The law is not a mere government means to satisfy public needs and orientate the state of law, the first steps, will in many cases, be to make the law more effective. It will be felt most strongly by the law-abiding citizen and most likely misinterpreted by the criminal element since they have no intention of obeying the law anyway.

A case in point can be found in the matter of seat controls. Many new restrictions have been placed on the use of automobiles. The Department of Transportation has announced that the use of seat belts and the wearing of seat belts is a national atmosphere of respect for the law and the society which it protects will not come from restriction of the many millions of law-abiding citizens who own guns and use them for the constructive and lawful sports of private citizens in the United States. It will take separate state legislation can't do this, let's keep our money and be honest and it is eradicate some of our own poverty, which has been making the headlines lately.

Much more respect would be evident for the United States in the other parts of the world for police of foreign aid and military assistance, besides being dedicated to human freedom and welfare, we are also national with due regard for our own national interests.

Agree Or Not,

I Say What I Think

By S. C. Van Caron

FRANKFORT, KY.—One of the key issues raised by the opposition to the 70 per cent sales tax when it was passed in February of this year, was "How can we afford to have a lot of business to the other states?" This has not proved so according to James E. Luckett, commissioner of Revenue. "The Department conducted studies of tax receipts of significant border counties on two different occasions," and there was no loss in tax revenue. "There is no statistical evidence that Kentuckians have gone from one state to another to buy goods and services as a result of the increased tax rate. Nor has the department received any complaints from businesses in or near border areas."

"When interviewed about the tax program and its acceptance in the state," he said this is the 1968 Kentucky sales tax estimate, "we're hitting it about on the nose."

Luckett said that the 1968 General Fund revenue for fiscal 1968-69 estimate was $197,951,655 and collections total was a bit short of that with $197,071,171.

Estimate for the road fund was $34,938,530 and collections total was $35,413,013 or about $4.8 million above the estimate.

Other state agencies were complaining about passage of the sales tax and forecasting a decline in their areas, the tax statewide has shown Revenue department to be an optimist.

It is well to recall that the sales tax had an emergency clause on the bill and it became effective April 1, 1968. The 1968-69 estimate was $197,951,655 and collections total was a bit short of that with $197,071,171.

Farm & Home

What is the most common characteristic of women today? They are busy in the home and outside of their home. They are busy in the home and outside of their home. They are busy in the home and outside of their home.

MERCURY VAPOURS

by Warren R. Fisher

It took a year, but I just figured out what I wrote to myself. I had written, "I don't like it." Then I promptly forgot that it was supposed to mean.

Why I will not like—this cold weather.

—M.V.—

Eugene Neal has a new way to remove leaves from trees. Seems Sunday morning he looked at a large pecan tree outside the breakfast room window and remarked to wife Dorothy, I wish those leaves would come down. Sure enough by mid-morning they had. The method, he says there's a good freeze the night before you start wishing then pray the sun will oblige.

Another gentleman, Bob Chatwin, thinks he has discovered a way to make an advertising copy so snooty, his clients can't read it.

The brown recluse spider which first made an appearance in Kentucky in September of 1965 in the western part of the state, has been three persons in Nicholas County so far. The bite of the brown recluse spider is considered more dangerous to humans than that of the well-known black widow.

Below is a reproduction of a picture and description of the spider taken from letter number MC, 359, University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service:

THE BROWN RECLUSE SPIDER
by a scientist

The brown recluse is a withdrawn species that at first glance looks like many of the more common house spiders. Adults average about 4/10-inch long, but they range in size from 2/10 to 1 1/2 inches. Usually they are rich brown or chestnut more, but they may be a light tan or cream. Because of many short hairs on their body, they appear to have the texture of suede. The brown recluse is a shy and elusive spider. It is a nocturnal spider. It is a shy and elusive spider. It is a nocturnal spider.
