Kovach Family Take Eight-Mile Hike In Kentucky--Underground

FRANKFORT--John J. and Mary Kovach and their son Steve of Dayton, Ohio, took an eight-mile hike in Kentucky recently--all of it underground. Twelve-year-old Steve likes spelunking and the lore and legend that surround all caves and caverns. He and his parents were particularly impressed with Kentucky's cave system.

"We don't have these in Ohio," offered Steve's father, referring to the many scenic and historic parks within the boundary of the Commonwealth. "Look at the license plates of cars traveling in Kentucky parks," he added, "and you will see almost four out of five are from the state of Ohio."

Mrs. Kovach, the former Miss Mary Katherine Acton, speaking for their many pleasant vacations in Kentucky for the past 20 years, emphasized the State parks were never lovelier, never more convenient and comfortable than on their visit this year. They have made automobile trips to Kentucky twice this year, and "this is our nineteenth year out of the past 20 to come to Kentucky."

At Carter Caves State Park, off US 60 in Carter County, the Kovaches enjoyed tours of the two caves, one known as Salt Petre Cave which has an interesting historical background and a legend of an Indian maid and her sweetheart. They saw Lover's Leap where the Indian maid fell to her death, and the trail followed by her lover when he discovered her body.

Before stopping at Carter Caves, the Kovaches made a brief stop at Kentucky Mushroom Farms Inc. at Lawton, also in Carter County and said by Manager Charles Broomall to be the second largest cave mushroom farm in the United States. The mushroom farm is being developed inside an 80-acre man-made cavern or cave formerly used as a rock quarry.

The most mileage accounted for in their underground trekking was at Mammoth Cave National Park where they made two long cave hikes.

In addition to touring more of Kentucky's Cleveland on future visits to Kentucky, they would like to do a bit of exploring on their own, in Morgan County, where they stopped for a weekend with friends, they learned of a little-known possible cavern at what is coloquially called the Poor Fork of Caney near Cannel City, a community that gained fame for its cannel coal at the turn of the century.

The likelihood of a cavern on Poor Fork of Caney intrigues the Kovaches and they have marked the area for some research and exploration on next summer's visit to Kentucky.

Historical Medallions Available

FRANKFORT--

A new type of souvenir, hand crafted in Kentucky, is now available in its bi-weekly outlook letter.

Total supplies (all such grains on hand, in storage or crop form) will be more than 220 million tons, up 8 million tons from last year; the feed-grain crop will be 174 million tons, about 2 million tons above last year's record level.

By category:

CORN: As of Aug. 1, 1968, production was estimated at 4.6 billion bushels. This is still 18 percent above the 1962-1966 average. U. S. yields are estimated at 81.5 bushels an acre.

OATS: Estimated at 938 million bushels, up 20 percent from last year and three percent above average. Per-acre yield is about 52.8 bushels an acre, a record level.

BARLEY: Estimated at 425 million bushels, up 15 percent this year.

RYE: Estimated at 24.1 million bushels for this year.

SORGHUM GRAIN: Estimated at 772 million bushels, up one percent from last year, and 30 percent above the 1962-1966 average.

In Kentucky, corn production is estimated at 75,920,000 bushels, and 73 bushels an acre, average yield; oats, 680,000 bushels, with average yield of 40 bushels an acre; barley, estimated at 1,312,000 bushels; rye, 130,000 bushels, down 32 percent from last year, and grain sorghum, estimated at 357,000 bushels, down from 1967.

Because of larger supplies, feed grain prices will average below loan rates at harvest time, and increase seasonally during winter and spring of 1968-1969. Summer of 1969 prices will be influenced by acreage consumption and yield prospects for the 1969 crop.

Corn prices are expected (in the summer of 1969) to be 3 to 4 cents above the loan rate; at harvest time, the price may be 90 cents a bushel or lower.

U. S. wheat production for 1968 is estimated at 1,606 million bushels, five percent above the 1967 record. Kentucky wheat production is estimated at 16 percent under the 1967 level.

Feed Grain Supplies, Crops To Be Higher In 1968-1969

LEXINGTON, KY.--Total feed grain supplies will be higher in the 1968-1969 period, the U. K. Cooperative Extension Service agricultural economics department said this week in

FOOTBALL

DAVE HUNTER-A GO-GETTER

With all that gear they wear on the playing field, it's difficult to recognize football players in their street clothes. I asked Russell Rice, University of Kentucky sports publicist, to point out Dave Hunter to me on the UK team plane bound for Lexington from Mississippi. Kentucky had lost a heart breaker the night before but Hunter had exhibited the fans with two interceptions, each time a sideline to sideline long return. "Just look for a little fellow wearing dark sun glasses," said Russ. Off the field he doesn't look the part of a college football safetyman.

"He's going to be a great safetyman," UK Coach Carlie Bradshaw said of the 5' 10", 168 pound sophomore. "He has quickness, and he'll go to the ball. Dave was the Arkansas decathlon champion in track, you know," Bradshaw continued, "and he's a fine boy and a fine athlete." Bradshaw said he heard about the Pine Bluff, Arkansas, native through a Baptist minister. "We had the minister in Lexington," Charlie went on, "and he took a church in Arkansas. He told us about Dave and that's how we got on to him."

Hunter still likes track. Before spring football practice got underway at Kentucky he took part with the Wildcat cinder stars participating in the broad jump and the 440. Dave also likes to hunt, fish and sing. He is a member of the National Honor Society. He also likes to play football. He has proved to be one of the most exciting newcomers in the Wildcat camp this season and as Coach Bradshaw says, "Dave goes for the Ball."

the gift shops of Kentucky State Parks. A medallion, named "Kentuckiana", is the first to be issued in a series of Kentucky Historical Medallions. It commemorates the 175th year of the Commonwealth.

The one-bronze, gold anodized medallion is designed and engraved by H. Alvin Sharpe, a native Kentuckian, who has revived and perfected an ancient art technique of hand crafting medallions.

The Educational Coin Company of Kentucky at Bargtn, commissioned the artist and distributes the medallions.

One of the first "Kentuckiana" medallions struck was presented to Governor Louie B. Nunn.

A second medallion, "Wilderness Road", is also ready for distribution.

Subjects for the medallions, which are noteworthy in the history of Kentucky, will be chosen by historians. A new medallion in the history of Kentucky series will be issued every six months.

A proof silver is struck in a limited number of 250 for each medallion. The ox-bronze medallions are struck in quantities according to demand.

The artist, Sharpe, has revived a lost metallic art which was known to the ancient Persians and Greeks. Paul Revere worked in this medium, but the art disappeared almost completely in the U. S. about 1840.

Putting-you-firsts:

(A quick tour of some of the thoughtful new features the 1969 Chevrolets offer that other cars in Chevrolet's field don't.)

Headlight washers

You push the windshield washer knob and hold it, and your headlights come clean.

Fluid is diverted to two jet nozzles at each light lens. (Outer lights only on duals.)

The spray removes up to 80% of accumulated dirt.

The feature is standard on 1969 Corvettes. It comes with the hidden headlights available on Camaro, Caprice and Kingswood Estate Wagons. It is available on all other models except Corvair.

Heated glass

In a moment your rear window will self-defrost.

Because we've built onto it a network of tiny ceramic strips capable of heating the entire surface.

Fog and frost disappear quickly and quietly. You just flick a switch.

The heated rear window is available on the 1969 Caprice Coupe and Impala Custom Coupe.

Pushbutton tire chains

You just press a button on the instrument panel and the rear tires get a shot of "liquid tire chain."

You spin your wheels once, wait a moment, and you're off—with traction you wouldn't believe possible on slick ice, or packed snow.

Available on all 1969 big Chevrolets.

Steering wheel lock

When you own a car as desirable as the 1969 Chevrolet, you don't take chances.

When you leave it, you lock it. Not just the doors.

You lock the ignition, steering wheel and transmission lever, too.

Our new lock on the steering column takes care of all that.

Standard on all 1969 Chevrolets, Chevelles, Chevy Novas, Camaros and Corvettes.

Sorry, car thieves.

Power steering plus

The 1969 Caprice, Impala and Camaro are available with a new type of power steering.

Variable-ratio power steering.

What it does is give you faster steering with fewer turns of the wheel.

Variable-ratio power steering is particularly helpful in short, full turns.

And parking becomes unbelievably easy. You'll see.

Walk-in wagons

The tailgate swings open like a door on most of our 1969 station wagons.

Which in itself is no big deal. But wait, there's more.

We've built a concealed step into the rear bumper.

You simply step up, over, and in.

(The way we build our wagons, you can do it without bumping your head, and without acrobatics.)

Walk into a wagon soon at your Chevrolet dealer's.

'69 Impala Custom Coupe

Putting you first, keeps us first.

Mexico City's High Altitude Calls For Care At Olympics

Heard any good borborygmi lately? You may if you're one of the many Americans going to the Olympics in Mexico City next month.

Borborygmi, or gastric growls, are just your stomach's way of letting you know it's hard at work. And don't be surprised if you hear a little more than usual from your lungs and heart too. For most people, it's nothing to worry about--just the higher altitude speeding up some parts of you and slowing down others.

Physicians at Aetna Life and Casualty, caution, however, that some health problems may occur because there's less oxygen in the air at Mexico City's mile and a half elevation.

Up there, you may feel yourself breathing a little faster and deeper as your lungs try to make up for the oxygen shortage. You might notice your heart pounding slightly as it pumps a little harder to keep blood with sufficient oxygen in it making the usual rounds. And your stomach, which goes a little slower up there, will give you an occasional rumble if you rush it.

You may react to the altitude by getting tired more easily, or, paradoxically, by becoming more active and unable to sleep as well. You might get a little giddy, excited or even argumentative.

The effects may be more bothersome to people with chest, heart or anemia problems because they're best off with more, not less, oxygen, Aetna physicians advise a check with the family doctor before leaving in such cases.

There's no way for Olympic travelers to duck the higher altitude, but there are some ways you can keep it from getting you down.

Unless you've been in training all summer, leave the exertions to the athletes. Strenuous climbing or running --to catch the tour bus, for example--may be best avoided.

If your new environment and the excitement of it all makes you feel tired, do as the natives do and take a little siesta.

The altitude slows your digestive processes down, so you'll be doing yourself a favor if you don't hurry while eating. It's helpful to eat lightly at first, but regularly.

With its 7,434 foot elevation, Mexico City has a mountain climate. This means hot sun, cool shade, dryness and glare. These may produce headaches, dry skin and chapped lips, so be prepared with a supply of your favorite remedies.

Should you get sick or hurt, Mexico City has excellent medical facilities. If a serious health problem develops, though, you may want to seek advice from the U. S. Embassy in Mexico City or the nearest American consulate elsewhere.

TOBACCO CROP READY TO CUT—Kentucky eyes are turned to fields of the ready-to-be-cut 1968 Burley tobacco crop. This year's yield is estimated at 392,500,000 pounds, or 2,500 pounds per acre, topping last year's total production by 22,900,000 pounds.

THE McDOWELL APOTHECARY SHOP, adjacent to the Ephraim McDowell Home in Danville, Ky., was the first drugstore west of the Allegheny Mountains. The shop was restored in 1959 and displays English Queensware and Delft drug jars on its counter-to-ceiling shelves.
