One More Instance

The Carlisle Mercury has been a part of the life of the Carlisle community for over 100 years. It has seen the growth of the town from a small hamlet to a thriving community. The Mercury has always been a voice for the people, reporting on the events of the day and providing news and information to the community. It has been a source of pride and a symbol of the town's history and heritage.

Twenty & Forty Years Ago

Twenty and forty years ago, the Carlisle community was a small town with a few businesses and a church. The Mercury was a small publication that provided news and information to the community. It was a source of pride and a symbol of the town's history and heritage.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,
 I am writing to you regarding the recent events in our community. I am concerned about the safety of our children and the well-being of our town. I hope that you can help me find a solution to this problem.

Looking at the Inside

By John M. Kirk
 If you ever wonder what is behind the scenes of the Carlisle Mercury, you have come to the right place. This column provides a behind-the-scenes look at the operations of the newspaper. It covers the editorial process, the business side of the operation, and the challenges faced by the staff. It is a candid and honest look at the inner workings of the Carlisle Mercury.

Agree Or Not, I Say What I Think

By S. C. Van Curen
 FRANKFORT, Ky.—The Kentucky Government Council's recent proposal that the bill for public higher education in the state will soar to $165 million by 1975, from its present $12 million, may have astounded some readers.

A look at past records reveals even more surprising information. Just how far has Kentucky come in the last decade or so?
 The 1968-69 budget for the five state supported universities and one college was $12,750,000. Five years ago, this appropriation was $12,750,000. The Kentucky Government Council's proposal, in the light of past history, doesn't appear unreasonable. Although the figure may shock the reader, to understand this further, let us look at the 1953-54 budget. It was $12,750,000. In 1953-54, the state supported five universities and one college. Some bankers in status where the writing is relatively low feel that the seven percent limit is raised and the real estate business will be hurt. With a few exceptions there is no real estate business in the state. The writing is relatively low feel that the seven percent limit is raised and the real estate business will be hurt. No other wagons have such a capacity for enjoyment.

Share you what we share. Say you're in a Chevrolet Kingedwood or Camaro With In Water when suddenly the road becomes nothing but chuckholes and ruts. Only you can't see them. You see, Chevy wagons that along on completely sealed off springs that smooth even the roughest road.
