

When Families Gather, It's Christmas!

Through the year, the warm Christmas has been taken in many ways. Today's Christmas tree is not the simple one of yore. Rather, it is a colorful affair, often lit with electric lights. The tree is usually replaced by a more elaborate one, decorated with lights, garlands, and ornaments. The tree is usually decorated only by relatives. Some, though, may have a tree in the home of a friend or relative. The tree is usually decorated by the family, and the decorations are usually made by the family.

Using Greens
Use of greens and garlands is a tradition that has been known for many years before the birth of Christ. The custom began with the ancient Egyptians. Many of the traditions of pagan festivals were later merged with the celebration of Christmas, and evergreens, because they stay green throughout the year, came to be regarded as the Christmas symbol of life and hope.

Decorating the Tree
Many ancient legends suggest that the first Christmas tree was decorated with lights and ornaments. The tree was decorated with lights and ornaments, and the lights were made of fat and tapers. The tree was decorated with lights and ornaments, and the lights were made of fat and tapers.

Exchanging Gifts

Burning the Log
Today's Christmas, though smaller in scale than those of yore, is still a time of joy and celebration. The custom of burning the log is a tradition that has been known for many years before the birth of Christ. The custom began with the ancient Egyptians. Tips For A Fire Free Holiday

FRANKFORT—"Spread joy to the world with a fire free Christmas season," is the holiday message from Billy Williams, director of the Division of Fire Prevention, Department of Public Safety.

Williams advises most decorations are ineffective and should be placed away from heat or open flames. All indoor holiday lighting should be turned off at night. Decorative materials wherever possible. Make sure decorations are properly secured. Do not use polyethylene foam for candle holders or for decorations where fire is likely. The fireplace is now safe place to burn them.
