Bluegrass Area corn growers will hear about production practices, new developments, and recommendations for 1969 at a corn short course Wednesday, February 19, at the Agricultural Science Center in Lexington.

The morning session opens at 9:15 with a welcome by Dr. John Eagland, chairman of the U. K. agronomy department. Also on the morning program will be a discussion of "Economics of Corn Production in the Bluegrass Area" by Harold Collins, Area Extension Specialist in Farm Management. Harold Miller, State Soils Specialist, will talk about "Fertilizing for Maximum Profits" and Jim Herron, Extension Specialist in Weed Control, will discuss "Herbicides for 1969," Shirley Phillips, Grain Specialist from U. of K. will close out the morning program with his subject "Disease Control and Varieties for 1969."

The afternoon program will get underway at 1:15 with a discussion of insect problems by a member of the entomology department. One of the high lights of the shortcourse will be a panel discussion by four area corn producers. They will talk about their experiences with no-till corn production. These producers are Sam Clay, Eugene Culton, James Patterson and Lawrence Simpson.

Good Seed Good Start. Builders say that a good house always starts with a good blueprint. Successful farmers, on the other hand, say that a good crop starts with good seed.

Despite what successful farmers say, and do, many farmers are failing to recognize the importance of good seed. As a result, they are not getting all of the advantages that science has bred into modern seed.

Extension specialists in North Carolina have set down seven simple rules which they believe will help people get more mileage out of seed.

First, read the seed tag. A person's best bet is to buy certified seed. Second, buy seed from a reputable dealer. Thousands of people are licensed to sell seed. Most of them know about seed; some of them don't. Third, start with a "high potential" seed of recommended variety. Fourth, prepare a good seedbed. Fifth, plant the correct rate of seed per acre. Sixth, use the right kind of planter, well adjusted. And seventh, follow the recommended practices throughout the growing season.

Dr. Darwin Braund, U. K. Dairy Specialist, says the future for Kentucky dairymen is bright, but it can become even brighter by more widespread adoption of the improved production practices which are already available. These practices include:

(1) the keeping of production and farm business records.

(2) earlier harvesting of hay for higher quality.

(3) maximum use and increased production of corn silage.

(4) the use of superior sires available through artificial insemination.

(5) challenging high-capability cows with enough feed balanced to meet nutrient requirements.

CAWOOD CALLS

BASKETBALL
By Cawood Ledford
WHAS Sports Directior

MARCH IS HARVEST TIME

March is harvest time in basketball. This team's success is measured in the tournaments then. And the recruiting seeds that have been sown, sometimes two or three years before, will be harvested in the grants-in-aid that the high stars sign.

It's two months away before the prospects sign on the dotted line, but the decisions at Kentucky and the other colleges have just about been made. At UK stacks of newspapers are kept on outstanding players from all over the country. The coaches are dispatched to talk with many of them. Assistant Coach Joe Hall says, "Everybody knows about the super stars produced in the high schools and everybody is just like you are, trying to get them." Joe says, "The type of player you need has a lot to do with your recruiting. Here at Kentucky we need some 'blue chip' big boys this year."

I asked UK Assistant Coach Harry Lancaster what, in general, did Kentucky look for in a potential roundball Wildcat. "Size, of course, is the most desirable thing," said Harry. "From there," he went on, "you compensate up or down. Usually the bigger they are the slower they are, and the smaller they are the faster they are. After size, we look for quickness. Now, I mean one-step quickness. Not how fast a boy can run from one end of the floor to the other, but how quick he is on that first step. That's what's important." He continued, "We like a boy with big hands. That's a pretty big ball, you know, and a boy with little hands will fumble it. We like a boy who can leap. Not just jump, but one with good spring in his legs. We, of course, like a good shooter, the boy who hits a high percent of his shots. After that, we like that good peripheral vision essential for a good passer. And finally," says Harry, "we want the kid with heart. And that you don't know until you get him. By heart, I mean the boy who doesn't get discouraged sitting on the bench, and when his turn comes to play he's ready. He's ready to go in and get the job done."

Kentucky, like many other colleges, hopes to entice the stars of the future to its campus when harvest time comes two months from now.

extension of the sales tax to services would produce between $10 and $20 million a year, depending upon what services are taxed.

Several states have studied this and Wyoming has extended it to services and so has Tennessee. Tennessee is having some problems.

The town of Lebanon, Kentucky, was captured twice by General John Hunt Morgan's calvary.

Retirement protection for workers and their families is increased, and so is the protection wives and children have if the worker should die. There is also improved protection for the entire family if the family breadwinner should become disabled for work for a period of 12 months or more.

Younger workers, as well as those who are middle-aged or older, can look forward to getting social security retirement benefits worth considerably more than the total they will pay into social security toward that retirement protection, McNary stated.

In addition, he said, they have survivors and disability insurance under social security that may mean as much as $75,000 to $100,000 in payments to an individual family, should the worker die or become disabled before work before retirement.

A look at the schedule of benefits and contributions in today's law, McNary said, will assure the worker that his social security is a good investment. But he can look forward to an even greater appreciation in its value in the years ahead. Unlike the usual private insurance contract which promises a fixed amount of money in return for a specified premium, the value of social security protection grows as the economy grows.

NOTICE: The State Employment Service Office is conducting a recruitment drive for men and women, 18 through 21 years of age, to join the Job Corps during the month of February.

In making this announcement today Mr. L. J. Foster, Lexington Office Manager, pointed out that Job Corps offers basic education, skill training, and useful work experience for youth who need a change of environment and individual help to develop self-confidence and a willingness to help themselves.

Mr. Foster said that young men and women who are out of work and out of school should apply in person at the Public Assistance State Building, 259 N. Limestone, Ky. Va.m.-5 p.m. Young men and women accepted by the Job Corps are sent to rural camps or urban centers near large cities located throughout the country usually within three weeks from the time their applications are accepted.

Through the Job Corps, young men and women learn a skill, earn money, and make new friends, as well as taking part in sports and recreation.

When the training is completed, they will be given help by the Kentucky State Employment Service in finding a job, or they may decide to go back to school or join the Armed Forces. 1-30-1tchg.

'Sleeping' Fruits Wake Up Fresh

Apples, lettuce, strawberries and other produce are getting the "sleep" treatment through controlled atmosphere storage — a technical process that holds fresh fruits and vegetables in suspended animation while being stored or shipped to market.

The produce doesn't ripen or spoil because the oxygen content in a warehouse or truck is lowered and other gases are substituted.

Using natural gas to put the brakes on nature keeps apricots fresh six weeks instead of 10 days. Sweet cherries last four weeks, not seven days.

Besides saving the produce industry millions of dollars a year in spoilage costs, controlled atmosphere storage can mean lower costs for the consumer because the producer isn't subject to the price changes of seasonal selling, and at the same time permits the consumer to buy fresh fruits out of season.
