

Health Certificates Or Examinations Not Required For Horse Show Entries

Kentucky owners and veterinarians all benefit from the major change in health requirements for horses entering shows—made at the last regular meeting of your State Board of Agriculture.

Effective immediately, no health certificates or veterinary examinations will be required of Kentucky horses entering shows in the Commonwealth. But owners of out-of-state entries still must have a health certificate for their horses—or have them examined by a vet.

This major change was made by the board—and the recommendation of Dr. L. C. Northrup, your State Veterinarian. He made the recommendation only after careful study of the rules governing health certificates and health examinations for all animals in the Commonwealth and health certificates.

You see, there are many horse shows in the state now—and the list is growing annually—that it is impossible for your Kentucky Department of Agriculture to have personnel at each event. And most of the nearly 70 county fairs have equine exhibitions. We heard, in our survey, that many shows could not get a veterinarian at all.

In addition, there are some areas in Kentucky, particularly in the Eastern region, where there are no vets. So, with no way to show, none of us want that kind of a horse in our state that isn't sure you wouldn't suffer. After all, the horse is what the image of Kentucky. Through the approval of local vets, the Department of Agriculture will continue to check on the health certificates of out-of-state animals.

Step Taken To Recover Drug Antitrust Damages

Another step in the recovery of some $11 million in antitrust damages for Kentucky is a part of a certain "through spectrum" antitrust suit was announced today by Attorney General James B. Breckinridge.

Breckinridge, referring to an advertisement appearing in the Kentucky newspaper on July 15, said: "The $11 million, the amount Kentucky is to receive, under terms of a $10 million antitrust settlement reached with three major drug companies last year after a complicated trial, is being distributed to the 100,000 Kentucky citizens who were injured by the price-fixing scheme of the three companies."

Under terms of the settlement agreement, the three companies were to be allocated to the State an amount of proceeds to be used for the state welfare program and other public hospitals. A fund of approximately $10 million was established from which individual claims can be drawn.

Breckinridge said that after a reasonable period of time any remaining portion of this fund will be transferred to the state treasury.

Democratic

Continued from Page 1 registration, precinct organization, fund-raising and dealing with media. The rules of the Young Democrats and the party's women's organization also will be topics.

The Young Democrats are planning meetings to coincide with the work shops, said Don Mills, state president of the organization. Mills said his members will attend the workshops and then have their meetings immediately after ward.

Culliff estimated that the workshops will attract several thousand persons. "This will involve a multitude of Democrats from all over the state," he said. "And it is not just overnight efforts, we intend to get some long-term results."

The first workshop will be on July 19 at Lexington. Following that will be meetings at Covington on the 21st; Louisville, 22nd; Morehead, 24th; Frankfort, 26th; Somerset, 26th; Bowling Green, 28th; Bardonia, 29th; Madisonville, 31st and Paducah, on August 1.

The workshops will start at 8 p.m. A dinner will be served at 7:30 after which Lt. Gov. Wendell Ford will preside.

Those who will lead the discussions are: Mrs. John Field of Paris, registration; Don Mills of Lexington, Young Democrats; and New media; Mrs. James H. Dickson of Harrodsburg, women's club; J. R. Miller, fund raising.

"This terrible waste demands our urgent attention," Mr. Nixon said. "It can be sharply reduced if everyone working in agriculture makes safety an integral part of management planning, a part of every job and every activity, both on and off the job."

Mr. Nixon called on all farm families, and their parents and groups serving or allied with agriculture, to use all possible means for minimizing the accident losses at work, in homes, at recreation, and on public roads.

The Sunnyside Homemakers are having their family picnic, Tuesday, July 22 at the city fair at 7:30 p.m.
