the Southern Mountains of Appalachia who now walk to school in the bitter cold."

Donations of clothing are deductible from income tax at their "fair market value." The used clothing that is still usable has a residual value of 15% of what it would cost to replace it with comparable new clothes . If it is not still usable it should not be given to charity.

Save the Children Federation's Program in the Southern Mountains does much to enable children to attend school. At Federation Clothing Centers, located in Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, serviceable garments are made available free of charge through School Administrators and in conjunction with Save the Children Federation's Self-Help Program conducted in Southern Mountain communities.

All school-aged residents of Nicholas County can bundle up all good wearable clothing urgently needed and, as members, be invited about Parent-Teacher Association Starkers, coats. Dresses and any other type of clothing. Bring it to the local schools. It will then be sent to the Processing Center. Save the Children Federation in Knoxville, Tennessee for distribution.
