Our Trip To Frankfort

by Kathy Aldrige

First, we visited the old state house where we saw Indian relics, famous paintings, statues, guns and other things. There was a winding staircase which went up to the rooms of the House of Representatives and Senate. In each room hung huge golden chandeliers. There were famous paintings of the governors and prominent men and women of Kentucky, hanging on the walls. Gun collections, blankets, flags, army helmets, coats, hats, bathtubs, moonshine stills, and other interesting things were on display. There was also a confederate room displaying flags, suits, guns and famous people connected with the Confederate Army.

Next, we went to the conservation farm where we ate lunch. We saw a black bear a mountain lion, a bobcat, three buffaloes, peacocks, cyotes, and a variety of different birds at the farm.

Then we went to the best place of all, the new capitol. The outside was pretty, but the inside was fascinating. The rotunda which was designed after a building in France, was beautiful. Under the rotunda were five statues. Holding the place of honor in the middles was Abraham Lincoln. Then there was Allen Barkley, Ephriam McDowell, and Jefferson Davis. Leaving the rotunda were two flights of marble steps, one leading to the House of Representatives the other to the Senate. In the House of Representatives voting was done electrically, but not in a way as in the Court of Appeals had a frustrated setting. We went into the historic the annex building and studied the floral clock was pretty. After we visited the souvenir shop we went back to school.

In April we took the 4th grade to the Carlisle Elementary school were we went to school trip. Their destination was Frankfort.

The trip was educational, fun-filling and exciting. The first place we went was to the old capitol. It was very beautiful, in the front part there was a statue of Daniel Boone. There were different rooms. One room was the governor's office. In another room there was a museum. Many displays, statues, paintings and other important things such as Daniel Boone's rifle, a carpet from the governor's office, a painting that is left of Daniel Boone when he was killed by Indians, and old guns and watches were there. Then we went to the new capitol. We saw a piece of the first national flag, a turkey and a piece of the first water jug. We saw was a model of the capitol, the only state was like it in Kentucky. We went to the senate and house chamber. In the house chamber there was a large wooden chair beside a table. Outside and in the senate chamber, we saw over the door, there was a picture of Daniel Boone. The last thing was the New Capitol. It was very beautiful statues of Abraham Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Daniel Boone, Ephriam McDowell, Henry Clay, Jeff Davis, and Alben Barkley. We looked at them after we explained it to us.

Articles such as carpet in the governor's office, pictures of all the governors of Kentucky, silver worth $50,000, models of the Confederate Army, the suit William Goebel was wearing, which he was shot, the clothing of stephen Foster, Jerry's mother, and other articles in the new capitol. Then we went to the House of Representatives Room. We saw a picture of George Washington worth $100,000, a mantelpiece that is really wood about Daniel Boone's watch, old bottles and old Confederate money.

For lunch we went to the Animal and Wildlife Farm. Here, we saw many animals.

After lunch we went to the New Capitol. This was a beautiful place. Most of the rooms were made of marble. The many rooms in this building were copied from buildings in France. This beautiful building was all built by hand. It took four years to build it.

As you stand in the front yard and look up it is 190 feet. There are five statues in the rotunda heading all was Lincoln. The House of Representatives was very clean. It had 50 seats for the representatives of Kentucky. It was a room of marble. If visitors would like to visit they would sit in the balcony.

The next room we visited was the Senate. There are 37 seats in this room. It is also marble.

The next room we went to was the Court of Appeals. This is the highest court in Kentucky. The guide explained to us who sat where, etc. This room is mahogany.

The last room we went to was the Reception Room. This is the most beautiful room in the Capital. It has a carpet which was until recently the largest in the world. It has a bronze ceiling. The furniture is also genuine. It is over 400 years old.

We went through the tunnel to the annex. We then went to the Floral Clock which is very beautiful. We then were boarding the bus for our trip back to Carlisle. We reached Carlisle at 3:05. We had many compliments of how quiet we were in both capitals. We appreciated this very much.

The seventh grade would like to thank Mr. Parsley and Mr. Wilson. We also would like to thank Mrs. Simona Mrs. Norsworthy, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Hall, Hardwick, Mrs. Silbert and Mrs. Hunter.

Diana Allison

We, the seventh grade at Carlisle went to Frankfort on Tuesday, April 29, 1969. We were escorted by three seventh grade teachers Mrs. Simona, Mrs. Norsworthy, and Mrs. Wallace.

We arrived and went to the Old State House. There we saw guns, William Goebel's suit which he wore when he was killed, Robert Stephen's canteen, Jefferson Davis's shoes, and the lamp which Stephen Foster wrote his songs by. We also saw arrowheads, cannons, old flags used in the wars, the gravel-quill and a silver service worth $30,000 dollars.

We went from the State House to the Conservation Farm. There we saw bears, peacocks, bobcats, a bald eagle, and buffaloes. We also ate there.

We went from the Farm to the New Capital to the floor of the senate. We are the statues of five men Jefferson Davis, Ephraim McDowell, Henry Clay, Alben Barkley and in the center Abraham Lincoln. The marble in the capitol came from Tennessee, Georgia and was imported from Italy. We were taken to the Senate Chamber and the Representatives chamber. We learned that our senate and Representatives do not vote by secret ballot as they do in other states. We went to the Court of Appeals. The ceiling and chandeliers were done in mahogany. From there we went to the room where the governor's office used to be. The carpet in this room was once the largest in the world, but is now 3rd largest. This room is furnished with Isaac Shelby's furniture. We went from there to the floral clock. All of the flowers were in bloom and the trees were out too. At the floral clock we made wishes and admired the beautiful scenery.

We would like to thank Mr. Parsley and Mr. Wilson for this educational trip. We could have never gone at a prettier time of year.

Annual Mountain Laurel Festival To Be Held In Pineville May 24

Youth, beauty, and blooms of mountain laurel will be mirrored in the pool at beautiful Laurel Cove, near Pineville on May 24. On that day, Kentucky college co-eds will compete for the title of 1969 Mountain Laurel Queen.

A towering, laurel-covered sandstone cliff will be the backdrop for the beauty contest, which is the focal point of the four-day Mountain Laurel Festival, being held for the 28th year at Pine Mountain State Resort Park.

The Festival begins the morning of May 22, but its official opening is that evening when an entertainment program will include the presentation of the queen candidates at Laurel Cove. It is to be followed by a reception in the Bert T. Combs Forestry Building. A Mountain Laurel Princess will be chosen the next day from a bevy of high school beauties. The Princess ball is to be held that night at 8 o'clock in the Pineville High School gymnasium.

Gaily-decorated floats and smiling queen contestants will grace the streets of downtown Pineville on Saturday morning for the traditional parade. A Governor's Luncheon at Herndon J. Evans Lodge will precede the ceremony in Laurel Cove. Kentucky Governor Louie B. Nunn will be on hand to present the new queen with a crown and a kiss. She will reign that night over a ball in her honor, beginning at 8 o'clock in the Pineville gym. A community worship service will be held on May 25, followed by a breakfast for the queen.

The first Mountain Laurel Festival was held in 1931. Historian and geologist Anne Walker Burns suggested a celebration in honor of Dr. Thomas Walker, a pioneer explorer and surveyor, who came through Cumberland Gap in 1750 with a group of companions, the first white men to venture into the Kentucky mountains. The festival in his honor has since emerged into a yearly celebration of the blooming of the mountain laurel.

Looking At The Inside

or wrongness of the decision to suspend the students who were arrested it will suffice to say that many of the UK students felt very strongly about the university's action and those who felt that the action was wrong said that to suspend students who were arrested violated the students due process of law by subjecting them to two punishments for the same act i.e. their civil sanction plus the university suspension. Those who felt that the university did the right thing argued that any university has a right to formulate rules to govern the activities of its students and that a student's right is to come to the university accepting all its rules or to go to another university.

This brings me to the point of this monologue as the recent actions of these activists vividly illustrates how they have been so successful in paralyzing many universities and that is by getting involved in genuine student issues and doing all that they can to forspent confrontation, and more importantly they engage their own subversive objectives unto the incident until the entire agenda is full of following for not only the initial request but for all the subsequent additions such as abolition of military research on campus and removal of ROTC credit for example.

The infestation of genuine student issues is and has been the most successful method of operation for campus Communists and other activists.

Yes, campus activists are revolting.
