Hickory Ridge Remembrances

By Mrs. J. A. Standiford

May I first congratulate my predecessors in writing about the early Settlements in Nicholas County, both Mrs. Boothe's article and Mr. Lewis Scott's "Memories" are so very interesting, and show an attitude between the races that Nicholas County should appreciate.

The following accounts of the past have been told to me largely by former residents of the county. My sources of information have been, J. W. Hunter, H. Sampson Sr., Mr. and Mrs. H. Sampson, Mrs. Elsie Sugg, Mrs. Will Bell, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Miller, Rolla Scott, Mrs. Ethel Boothe, Mr. L. P. Scott and Mrs. Laura Wade Martin, To each I am grateful.

My interest in Hickory Ridge area and its population was aroused when Mrs. Ethel Boothe called me one day and asked what I knew about the settlement, how it got its name and the names of some of the inhabitants of the place. This conversation and others later caused me to recall many memorable stories I had heard about this negro settlement.

The Civil War had many interesting facts beneficial, but the results of some, are quite a mix. Conditions at the close of the conflict brought this. I had read Harriett Beecher Stowes--"Uncle Tom's Cabin" and this had produced many unanswerable "Why's", and caused me to ask numerous questions regarding situations. One question especially was, why were some slave masters kind and some unkind. The general answer was. "We are human and prone to err." This did not satisfy me, It seemed to me that each race depended on the other but slavery was not the answer for either race.

The Civil War had ended, the negroes were emancipated. President Lincoln dead and a terrible reconstruction period ahead. White families were divided because of the stand they had taken on the issue, and now were deprived of their help, as their capabilities were reduced until they could just barely exist and were not able to assist the negroes get started. Just how much the Negro depended on the whites and the white landowner depended on the Negro, was a problem for each to discover and solve. Thus the reconstruction separated and segrated.

Many of the kind masters were rewarded as their satisfied former slaves were reluctant to leave and many asked to be allowed to remain with their masters and work for a salary. The hard driving masters were at a disadvantage, for their slaves were glad to be free, but these soon found that freedom did not solve their problems. Their only recourse was to band together in settlements and try to make a new start.

We are told there were three, perhaps four such settlements in Nicholas county. Hickory Ridge, Fisher's Station, Barterville Village and likely one at or near Buzzardroost.

These Negroes were free from odious slavery, but without education, leadership and very little money, their handicap was staggering. We have heard Negro males were given $25.00 and a new outfit of clothing when they departed from their masters, Many had large families and with so little money and so many places to use it they ye had problems. However frugality and their industrious natures gave them heart to try to make a new life for themselves.

The taxpayers realized the Negroes needed education to lift them out of their condition and a school was provided. These people were desirous of a place to worship and built a church. We are told these people were generally law abiding citizens. The men worked on nearby farms of the whitemen and their wives and daughters helped the white neighbors with household tasks. I recall my mother saying Laura and Mattie Wade stayed with us when we were children and Mrs. Buster McClanahan said that Carrie Latham stayed with her when she was ill.

The Reconstruction period 1865-75 was especially difficult for both races. It is stated generally that the Civil War affected Nicholas County only slightly, but just little was known about it, communication was slow and travel practically impossible and of course all were too busy just trying to live, so little complaint was noted. How the War had ended the cause were, but the settlement only started until both races realized their problems and hands again. Let us remember the lessons learned from the past and profit by them.

It might be well to state that the war conditions existing in the country also in the Negro and religious after working under hard masters but were really beneficial to the ambitious slaves worked hard, some saving enough to buy their freedom and farming and selling of Negroes was legal then. Some, sometimes bought their freedom with unscrupulous men, an intolerable situation. Then there was the separation of families, this seemingly was inhuman and needed changing.

So when the war had ended the slaves were free, it was best for all concerned to forget and forgive and somehow provide for the present to improve the future, and just that seemed to be the goal of both races, but still great and grave problems had to be solved. Segregation was not the answer for the last 100 years has proved this, as the song goes, "People Need People". We are all human regardless of the pigment of our skin, It really seems that both races realized this situation and never became too widely divergent in their views of need in Nicholas county. I am happy this should make all of us.

Soon after the educational facilities were available and taken advantage of by the Negro, their problems were eased, before long the young Negroes migrated to other areas to obtain more lucrative employment, some moved to Lexington, others to Henryville. This section located at Broadway extension in Carlisle, Here there were better schools and more churches, However some of the older residents of Hickory Ridge were content to remain where they had lived so long and were laid to rest near where their beloved church and school had stood. They had been deprived of their church by storm and their school by fire, as their centers of vital interest were gone. It was time for another change and the Negro seemed joyful to again be near their white neighbors.

I have heard that Stephen Brown was the name of one of the ministers at Hickory Ridge Methodist Church, Peter Vinegar was the principal speaker at their Camp Meetings, Great crowds attended these services, both white and negro. Rolla Scott remembered a Camp Meeting at Hickory Ridge and said as many as 500 attended, both black and white, The music and shouting could be heard for miles, The people came in wagon loads from the other settlements.

Mrs. Elsie Sugg remembered when she as a child lived in Nicholas county, that the Methodists of Barterville Village often went to Hickory Ridge church and as they returned home, sang Negro Spirituals, such as "Sing Low Sweet Chariot" and "My Name is Written On High." Mrs. Sugg recalled the names of Thomas Dickerson and wife, Chaney, among their children was a son named Adrian.

Mr. Lewis P. Scott remembered that Colored Camp Meetings were held in Baxter's Woods and were called open air services, with plenty of hot fried fish, corn bread and hot coffee on hands. He especially spoke of their lively and earnest singing. He said one year the program featured a Boy Preacher, who spoke hardest. One of their favorite songs was, "Who Built The Ark", Mr. Scott also stated that wagon loads of Negroes going home at midnight sang lively spirituals.

Mrs. Boothe told the names of families who were inhabitants of Hickory Ridge were; Col. Whitton Young and wife, they had a midget son and Whitton had been in the slave market, Burt Young and family, the Grouse family, William Carlisle, Archie Moore and family, Amy Dickerson, Bill Dickerson, Owen Mark and family, Owen Mark was said to be half Indian, and there was a huge hickory tree on the Ridge, each time Owen approached the tree, he struck it and gave a War-whoop that could be heard for miles.

The acres these people cleared remain with their memories as a monument to their industry and ambition. Many of these acres have been farmed by white farmers, but the memories of the Negroes who lived there remain. Miss Nancy Talbert Awarded Medallion

Miss Nancy Talbert is one of 17 remaining members of the class of 1919 awarded Collins Anniversary medallions at Georgetown College's 140th anniversary commencement, Saturday, May 31.

The habit of presenting medallions to georgetown's seniors dates back with the College's 75th anniversary in 1904, since that time, every living member of a golden anniversary class has received the handsome medal.

The awards are made by the recommendation of the alumni office and Robert Collins of Lexington.

Miss Talbert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Talbert, was awarded the medallion in recognition of her outstanding scholastic achievement during her freshman and sophomore years at Georgetown.

Miss Talbert lived in the county until 1929 when she moved to Carlisle. She graduated from Carlisle High School in 1937 and from Georgetown College in 1941. She taught school in Carlisle until her marriage to Dr. Robert Lee Talbert, Jr. in 1943.

Dr. Talbert is a veterinarian and has been in the Carlisle area since 1946. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia.

Mrs. Talbert is a member of the Carlisle Christian Church where she has been active in the Christian Women's Fellowship. She is also a member of the Carlisle Woman's Club and the Carlisle Study Club.

The Talberts have two children, Mary Ann, a junior at Georgetown College and Robert Lee, a freshman at Georgetown College.
